City fills streets with song in tribute to drowned pair

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

HUNDREDS of people packed Canterbury city centre at the weekend to pay tribute to the two young men who drowned in Reed Pond.

Hugo Wenn, 17, and Daniel Lloyd, 25, who were found dead in the pond near Tennyson Avenue, were well-known buskers in the area.

On Saturday, several of the city's streets were filled with music, singing and beatboxing, as tributes were paid. A candle-lit vigil was also held.

A single called Guiding Stars by Mr Lloyd – known as Taihg – was released by friends and has reached number eight in the singer/songwriter iTunes chart and 186 in the official iTunes chart.

His family paid tribute. "Daniel was a larger-than-life character who will leave a massive hole in our lives. His talent helped to reveal a unique and beautiful soul and we will miss him dearly."

Mr Wenn's family also paid tribute: "Hugo was a lovely boy who lived life to the full. He enjoyed every waking moment and enriched all those whose lives he touched."

Speculation still surrounds how the two men died.

A 54-year-old man arrested on suspicion of murder was released without charge.

A 28-year-old man arrested in connection with the incident on suspicion of supplying drugs was released on police bail.

Officers have stressed they have not been carrying out a murder investigation.

DOCUMENTARY

Director comes up with the goods by filming shed for free

HE'S worked on EastEnders, The Bill and Casualty, but Kent film maker Tim Leandro's first love is documentary.

And this time it's a zero budget tale concentrating on the life of people working at Canterbury's The Goods Shed.

The former railway goods shed is now a popular farmers' market and restaurant. Mr Leandro decided it was an ideal subject for a short documentary and the film has finally had its first screening.

The Sheriff of Canterbury joined an audience of TV and film industry professionals at the Gulbenkian Cinema for the preview of From Soup to Nuts.

Award-winning Mr Leandro, who this year celebrates 25 years of service to the British TV and film industry, has his roots firmly planted in factual film-making, but he has also directed dramas like The Vice and Ultimate Force.

Mr Leandro said he was inspired by the micro-community that work, create and live in The Goods Shed.

The 35-minute film concentrates on the personal stories of individuals whose lives are intertwined at the location.

He said: "This film is classic documentary with a twist. I am very fortunate in that a group of highly talented collaborators worked with me for no fee to make it happen."

"It's a zero budget film and has taken over a year to complete because we had to fit it around our work schedules, but the effort has been worth it. It's a very personal film."

"I tend to think that if I can make a film that I like then others will probably like it too."

Snaps of The Beatles found and developed after almost 50 years

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ONE of Britain's best known photographers has rediscovered some historic shots of The Beatles in action – and after an exhibition in Kent, they will be going on sale.

The series of five newly discovered photographs of John Lennon, Paul McCartney and George Harrison were taken a staggering 48 years ago by Faversham's John Farrier, who is due to photograph US president Barack Obama soon.

He was raking through old negatives and was stunned at what he'd found.

The pictures were taken at the Odeon Cinema in Lewisham.

sham during a live concert in December, 1963. They were developed with the help of modern day imaging technology and readied for display.

All five 20ins x 16ins Gelatin Silver black and white photographs will be on show for three weeks only at the Lilford Gallery, Palace Street, Canterbury, from February 11 until March 3.

They are sure to generate interest among Beatles fans, and the gallery boss David Lilford said they will go on sale for about £2,000 each.

Mr Farrier said: "I was going through the extensive archives of political and celebrity photographs I have taken over the past 20 years and came across a small battered negative box and found inside a number of scratched negatives.

"They had been taken on my father's Agfa camera when I was around 16, at a Beatles concert in Lewisham, south east London.

"Once I found out what they were, I sent them to my print master in London to investigate the possibilities for reproduction to large format prints.

"Sadly, the negative image of Ringo Starr was too damaged to reproduce a print, but after a bit of modern technology thrown into the process on the rest – the enlarged prints were ready to view.

"I was delighted with the atmosphere that came from the prints – just electrifying – the memories came flooding back – the screaming and hysterical madness lifting everyone off their seats at the concert. I Saw Her Standing There was ringing in my ears – my favourite number of that night.

"To complete the unique collection, a separate photograph taken some years later of the group's record producer, George Martin, has also been included at the Lilford Gallery. This never before seen photograph was taken at Air Studios, with George at the recording console – a memorable occasion."

Mr Farrier is currently working on a series of exhibitions of his political photographs called Voices from Westminster, taken during the Margaret Thatcher era. An exhibition of his celebrity shots is also planned in London. This will include images of Sir Cliff Richard, Sir Tom Stoppard, Roald Dahl, Sir Jimmy Savile, Ernie Wise, Terry Wogan and Hardy Amies.

WEATHER

Snowfall predicted for this weekend

SNOW has been predicted for this weekend.

Press Association weather experts say that on Saturday temperatures in Kent could drop to -2C, and there could be a few snow showers, most frequently in the east of the county.

And on Sunday temperatures could fall as low as -4C and there could be snow across Kent, particularly in the morning.

This picture of a spectacular ice formation gives an idea of what might be in store this weekend. It was taken on Wednesday by the B2068, Stone Street, close to the village of North Leigh.

And health chiefs asked people to keep an eye on the vulnerable during the cold weather.

Dr Gabriel Scally, director of public health for NHS South of England, said: "It's important to look out for our neighbours, and make sure they have all they need to help them through the cold spell. Check that elderly or more vulnerable people have at least one living area that's warm, their heating is working properly and they have food supplies in so they won't have to venture out."

Laughter and cheers as county bids farewell to 'legendary' Dave Lee

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

FOR the man who brought so many smiles to the people of Kent, the funeral of Dave Lee was never going to be a sombre affair.

And just as the great Kent legend would have wanted, laughter and cheers rang out from Canterbury Cathedral as friends and family said farewell to the much-loved comic, who lost his battle with pancreatic cancer last month aged 64.

It was standing room only as more than 1,000 people packed out the cathedral on Monday, with many of his celebrity friends attending.

EastEnders star Shane Richie, former footballer Neil Ruddock and comics Jim Davidson, Joe Pasquale and Bobby Davro were just a few of the long list of stars to pay their respects.

Dave's daughter Debbie Glew, 42, said the family – sons Darren, 44, and Justin, 40, and his six grandchildren – had been overwhelmed by the support and love from everyone who knew the popular funnyman.

Speaking at the funeral, she said: "We never realised how much he was adored and how he had touched so many. He was the most beautiful, caring, selfless person anyone could wish for."

"Since he was diagnosed we have laughed, cried and had some fabulous times."

"He was chuffed when he was told he would be made Freeman of the City and I just know he would have taken a herd of sheep through the city."

"People say it's the good ones that are taken first. Dad's with the great comedians in the sky now."

But tears of sadness were soon replaced with tears of laughter as Dave's comedy pals took to the pulpit to share humorous anecdotes about their beloved chum.

Close friend and entertainer Richard Digance had mourners rolling in the aisles with his eulogy.

"Dave Lee was a big bloke; he was £2 million big and as big as Kent. I found it ironic that the day we lost Dave, 67 Little Chefs closed down."

Digance spoke fondly about his friend's charity work and the annual celebrity golf day which helped Dave Lee's Happy Holidays charity, which sends sick and underprivileged Kent children on holiday, reach the £2 million mark.

"He was the leader and we were the pawns," said Digance.

"We all had to attend Chart Hills and play golf to some sort of pathetic standard and he soon had us all involved."

"Jim Davidson, Shane Richie, Chas and Dave, Bobby Davro – more and more pawns joined his army. I wouldn't have been surprised to see the Queen herself in a golf buggy giving out steak rolls and Jack Daniels."

He added: "This is a big day for Dave – it would be a sad day if it was in silence. I think when we reach the end of this service let's give him the applause he so gladly deserves."

EastEnders actor John 'Nasty Nick' Altman – an old friend of Dave's – and pantomime producer Paul Hendy gave readings, while family friend Roger Hyder and former BBC Radio Kent presenter Barbara Sturgeon gave two short reflections about the work Dave did with his charity.

Actor and comedian Bobby Davro made a final short tribute.

"Everyone knew Dave was a funny man. He had bucket-loads of likeability and everyone loved him," he said. "How I remember him is not just his generosity, but his smile. As we think of Dave, let us think of him smiling. He brought so much joy into our world."

The service was led by the Dean of Canterbury, the Very Reverend Robert Willis, who said Dave was now reunited with his late wife Linda, who died five years ago.

During the service, mourners sang The Lord is my Shepherd, All Things Bright and Beautiful, and Jerusalem.

Celebrating his life, young choir boys even sang the Ghostbusters theme in memory of his famous 'bench sketch' – a regular feature of the Marlowe theatre pantomime where he performed more than 1,000 times over 16 years.

As the coffin was carried out, mourners took to their feet in rapturous applause and cheers which echoed out onto the streets of Canterbury.

The funeral service was followed by a private family cremation at Barham.

Dave, who lived in Canterbury, was made a Freeman of the City posthumously on Tuesday.

ART

First Turners on show at Turner

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

MARGATE'S Turner Contemporary is holding its first major exhibition of JMW Turner's work.

Eighty-eight of the artist's pictures are on show at the gallery until May 13.

Turner was a frequent visitor to the seaside town, spending time there as a child and again later in his life. He is said to have remarked to art critic John Ruskin that "the skies over Thanet are the loveliest in all Europe".

The show, Turner and the Elements, has a number of the artist's paintings of Margate and the north Kent coast.

It has attracted interest from media around the world and received rave reviews.

The works have been displayed on a theme linked to the elements as featured in Turner's work – earth, water, air and fire. A fifth section, fusion, shows how he tried to combine these together in his art.

It ranges from the more conventional water colours of his earlier work to the swirling

BY THE ARTIST: Eighty-eight of JMW Turner's works are on show

ence in nature and transmit this by the way he painted."

The collection of paintings has mostly come from the Tate Gallery in London with a few others from around the world.

It was shown in Europe before making its way to Thanet and this is the only time many will be seen in the UK.

Victoria Pomeroy director of the Turner Contemporary said: "This is a great time for us. We have been working on the Turner build for more than 10 years and to have an exhibition by the artist who spent so much time in Margate is a very special moment.

"This exhibition would not have been possible without the enthusiasm and ideas of many people. It takes a great deal of logistical thinking to put an exhibition like this together."

Another exhibition, Walk, is also running at the same time.

Created by Canterbury-based artist Hamish Fulton, it is a series of sketches, films and photographs based on his experiences of walking in many parts of the world.

Fulton has walked in more than 25 different countries and for two days in 2009 he was the oldest man to have climbed Mount Everest.

CAMPAIGN

Protestors occupy seafront

A GROUP linked to the Occupy movement, which has held high-profile protests in New York and at St Paul's Cathedral in London, has camped outside the Turner Contemporary Gallery.

Occupy Thanet is part of the many protests emerging across the world campaigning against economic and social inequality.

A spokesman for the protesters said: "We are lucky enough to live in a beautiful part of the world. However we are ashamed that the High Street and seafront have been allowed to deteriorate.

"We fully understand that, during a recession, cutbacks do have to be made. However, this is not a recession, this is a robbery where capitalism has operated without constraint or conscience."

The campaigners have pitched their tents by the gallery's entrance steps.

A campaign against live animal exports from Ramsgate Harbour also staged a protest outside the gallery last October.

Enterprise scheme asks business and charity to co-operate for growth

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

DELEGATES from banking, local authorities, community groups, business and charities met this week to work out the best way to pool resources, boost the economy of the county and keep jobs in Kent.

Enterprising Opportunities, which facilitates links between companies, the voluntary sector and individuals in order to promote sustainable growth, held the sessions which took place at Kent Enterprise House in Herne Bay.

Those present said they saw the launch of Social Enterprise Kent as a sort of 'Big Society for business' as the organisers looked to show how co-operation and innovation can allow growth in a time of economic uncertainty, where previous methods of funding have dramatically decreased or dried up altogether.

"What we want to do is form partnerships between charities, community groups and companies," said Enterprising Opportunities director of resources Claudia Sykes.

"We want charities and community groups to decrease their reliance on grant funding which is ever-more uncertain at the moment."

"In the current economic climate opportunities do still exist – and greater innovation and co-operation can lead companies, and especially charities, away from a reliance and dependence on grants towards self-sustainability."

"Many small companies and community groups do not have the resources to do such things as effective marketing. But by working together they can use one another's abilities to work in co-operation to mutual benefit."

"When times are hard, that's when innovation needs to be at its height."

Among the 40 delegates at Tuesday's meeting were representatives of banks including HSBC, as well as local property developers.

Justin Chant is head of marketing for Enterprising Opportunities, which receives some support from Kent County Council, but is self financing thanks to the businesses which are under its umbrella.

"For smaller companies and charities this event was an opportunity for them to talk to those involved in the financial and property sectors," he said.

"Forming partnerships is what we consider important for sustainable growth."

Ms Sykes added: "Another important part of the work we do is keeping jobs in Kent. By focussing on local sustainable businesses we can achieve this. They are not multi-nationals who will pull out of Kent at the drop of a hat and take jobs elsewhere."

"An example of how we make these partnerships work was well demonstrated by the catering we organised for our event."

"Two groups – one that looks to provide jobs in Ramsgate and one which promotes healthy eating have joined together to set up a kitchen. Staff who work there provided the food for us."

"It was an effective way of showing our delegates how our ideas work in practise."

Unleash your inner GEEK at retro computer games expo

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KENT'S first major gaming expo has reached the next level.

Plans to put on the huge exhibition, backed by media partner Archant KOS Media, are steaming ahead and organiser Kate Kneale said: "It's all systems go."

And she's right. Retro gaming will be a huge slice of GEEK (Game Expo East Kent) 2012, held in Margate this month.

They have decided to set up various easy-to-follow zones, so gaming fans can quickly hunt down their favourite old school console.

In Green Geek will be Sega; Blue Geek is Nintendo; Yellow Geek contains the Best of British zone, such as Commodore and Atari; and finally Purple Geek contains the Playstation, Xbox and Obscura zones.

Ms Kneale said: "It is going to be so big that we felt people need an easy way to move around the halls."

There will be tournaments in The Pit and The Ring, and there's even a celebration of 25 years of Street Fighter and Final Fantasy.

Ms Kneale, who works from Marine Studio in Albert Terrace, Margate, said: "This is a pilot, we are hoping to make a big enough splash that it will be apparent that it should be an annual event."

"The idea is to create a core celebration of the last four decades of video games and consoles and around that build an expo which looks at future skills, education, and business opportunities.

Beyond the Winter Gardens where it is being staged, we are encouraging venues to host game-related events so people coming into town can not only stay and play all day but can eat, drink, watch and talk about gaming and games well into the evening, too.

"We are still looking for people to come along and join in, be this as visitor, speaker, or sponsor. With the right backing, this can be a force worth reckoning with in the UK gaming industry."

SUPER: A

Mario Kart tournament will be among the many events at the show

Ms Kneale added: "Britain has always been at the forefront of the video games industry, but never more so than during the 1980s.

"Whilst America and Japan were embarking on their plots for global domination, British computing and gaming was setting sail on its own adventure to revolutionise both living room and classroom.

"GEEK 2012 is proud to celebrate the outstanding companies and systems that put Britain firmly on the gaming map.

"Names like Acorn, Sinclair and Amstrad are easy to recall, but how about Dragon Data and Tangerine, or even Miles Gordon? These will all be represented at this amazing show."

Protecting vulnerable

KENT Police Authority has responded to calls by Home Secretary Theresa May for forces to do more about anti-social behaviour. It says a new way of responding to calls about anti-social behaviour was introduced last year to help protect the most vulnerable people. Individuals most at risk of harm already receive a priority response and an officer is sent to vulnerable callers.

EVENT

Free cruise to be won as travel and leisure show pulls in to Dover docks

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE hugely popular Travel & Leisure Show is set to return to the Dover Cruise Terminal next month for its fifth fantastic year.

The Archant KOS Media event will be held over two days to accommodate the demand from tour operators, cruise line companies, hotels, holiday promoters, tourist attractions and travel agents.

The show begins on Saturday, March 10 (11am-3pm) focused on group travel and the tourist industry, while the following day (10am-4pm) will be aimed at the public with presentations, films and talks, as well as children's entertainment.

Group travel can include sports clubs, community groups and schools all planning excursions, along with larger family trips, as those travelling as part of a group can obtain significant discounts – which they can learn about at the show.

The event offers the very best in tourism throughout the region and across the English Channel, and has attracted the cream of the UK's travel organisers, itinerary planners, tour operators and travel agents.

OFFERS: Fifth year for the travel event

Visiting the show and parking is free and there are many great prizes to be won.

Fred Olsen Cruise Lines is once again offering the main prize – a magnificent centenary cruise aboard either the Braemar or Black Watch sailing from Dover.

The show also features a selection of the great leisure opportunities and tourist attractions which exist throughout the south east of England and France.

These include environmental groups looking after the glorious countryside of south east England and world-class attractions such as the Historic Dockyard Chatham, and White Cliffs Country which looks after the iconic Dover coastline. Historical sites, gardens, museums, cruises and days out are all represented in this wide-ranging showcase of tourism talent and experience.

The towns of northern France such as picturesque Berck-sur-Mer, historic Arras and bustling Dunkirk, famous for its vital role in World War Two, will also be represented.

A newcomer this year is the Somme Battlefields' Partner network, which offers trips to the beautiful part of France which was the scene of life and death struggles between the British and Germans armies almost a century ago.

Steven Spielberg's epic film War Horse – which reaches its climax along the Somme – has bought the horror of the trenches and the bravery of the men who fought in them to a whole new generation, and this tour offer the chance to experience the land over which so much blood was spilt.

The France Zone gives information on short or long breaks, accommodation and leisure experiences a short hop across the water, and also offers the Flavours of France attraction where the world-famous produce of the area can be sampled.

Soldiers follow in footsteps of WWI heroes for charity

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

QUICK MARCH: Ashford's TA

TERRITORIAL Army personnel will march from Ashford to Ypres to remember the tens of thousands of Reservists who did the same trip during World War One.

But while 10 per cent of the fighters never came back and one in four were wounded, the 20 Kent soldiers should make the 213-mile round trip without any casualties.

It's the first time since World War One the feat is being attempted by the British military.

Captain Phil Linehan from the Ashford-based 133 Field Company REME (Royal Electrical and Mechanic Engineers) is organising the incredibly journey.

Capt Linehan said: "The sheer number that made the trip during the Great War is mind boggling, and the fact many never came back heart-breaking. More than one million British lives were lost in the Somme battles.

"We want to mark the brav-from the TA Centre, Chart Road, Ashford, to Ypres via Hythe Road going past the office of Kent on Sunday, and then on to Hythe then to Dover.

Capt Linehan said: "From there we will go by sea to Dunkirk and then march to Poperinge, which is twinned with Hythe and the Toc H, where many soldiers had their last respite before heading the last eight miles or so to the Menin Gate and the frontline."

Toc H is an international charity and membership movement that emerged from a soldiers' club in Poperinge, during the war.

Capt Linehan went on: "Then we will do the Belgium 62 mile march over three days and walk back to Ashford in time for tea on May 22.

"We are doing this to raise money for ABF The Soldiers' Charity. Following in their footsteps is one way we can show our amazement at their achievement."

EDUCATION

Preschool is going back to nature to teach young minds

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ENGLAND'S first forest school for youngsters aged between two and five has been set up in the county.

EarthCraftuk Community Interest Company operates in 300 acres of privately owned ancient woodland near Canterbury.

The land is owned by the Dawes family, who also own Mount Ephraim Gardens near Faversham, and youngsters will spend their days outside in the sun and the rain learning all about nature.

Director Clair Hobson said: "In essence we run outdoor forest school programmes and nature-based learning for children, young people, adults and families. Something we truly believe in the value of."

She added: "The philosophy of forest school is based on the desire to provide children with regular long-term experiences in the natural environment which helps develop levels of emotional intelligence – self-awareness, self-regulation, self-motivation, social skills and empathy."

She said building confidence and self-esteem along with physical skills was vital.

Ms Hobson said: "Our newest additional project is a full-time outdoor forest preschool for those aged between two and five, which will be open Monday to Friday, 48 weeks of the year.

"Inspired by Forest School's Scandinavian origins, this is the first full-time outdoor preschool offered in England.

"The 20 young children will be learning skills such as cooking over the open fire in the outdoor kitchen, growing an array of fruit, vegetables and herbs in the forest garden, making musical instruments, tracking animals in the forest, building forest shelters and letting their personal creativity run wild by using the natural sustainable resources around them.

"Surrounded by the inspiration of the forest, there is plenty of time for free play which allows the children to become familiar with the plants and animals that surround them.

"Nature stories, fairy tales and puppet shows kindle the imagination and affirm the magical feeling of the forest."

The idea is for children to be in daily contact with the elements throughout the seasons.

She said: "We are able to engage in the fundamental processes of life in a hands-on way and with a seasonal approach."

LITERATURE

Celebrations to be a tale of two centuries as Dickens' birth is marked across the county

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE spotlight will shine firmly on Kent over the coming months as celebrations for the bicentenary of the birth of renowned author Charles Dickens take place.

Events are being held to commemorate the author's 200th birthday – which falls on Tuesday – with tourism chiefs hoping to see a major financial boost to the local economy.

Sandra Matthews-Marsh, chief executive of tourism board Visit Kent, said the county was a must-see area for Dickens enthusiasts.

"We have so many places that you can identify in his books, so many places he stayed, lived and wrote, and so many events and attractions celebrating his life and work."

"Our research reveals that in a regular year 10 per cent of people using the Visit Kent website and then coming to the county are interested in Dickens and our literary connections."

"The value of literary tourism to Kent and Medway alone has been estimated at more than £1.6 million."

"Clearly, with the bicentenary celebrations and all the publicity for Dickens' work on television and radio, that is bound to grow considerably this year."

Kent played a huge part in the celebrated writer's life, with his father, who worked as a clerk for the Royal Navy, moving the family to Chatham from Portsmouth when Dickens was just three years old.

Despite moving to London aged 10, Dickens felt such affection for Kent that he moved back, buying Gad's Hill Place in Higham, near Rochester, in 1856.

Until his death in 1870, he became a familiar figure, walking energetically around the Medway towns, to and from Gravesend station or out on the Hoo Peninsula.

But his affection for Kent didn't stop there.

The author first visited Broadstairs aged 25, where he worked on The Pickwick Papers.

He returned to the town frequently until 1851, staying at his seaside residence, which has since been re-named Bleak House.

It was in Broadstairs that he found inspiration for the famous character of Miss Betsey Trotwood who featured in David Copperfield.

Oliver Twist, Nicholas Nickleby, The Old Curiosity Shop and Barnaby Rudge were also written in Broadstairs.

Medway, Canterbury and Gravesend – where Dickens spent his honeymoon with his wife Catherine Hogarth – were also the settings for scenes in his novels.

This year's Broadstairs Dickens Festival will run from June 16-22, with special events to commemorate his 200th birthday.

Charles Dickens School has also unveiled its new Dickens Theatre with a bust of the author inside.

A series of events, including talks, readings and theatre productions, will be held in Rochester and Chatham from February 6 to March 20.

Two large festivals will also be staged in June and December.

Medway Council's cabinet member for community services Cllr Howard Doe said: "We're very proud to celebrate Dickens' many connections with Medway in this special year, when the 200th anniversary of his birth is being commemorated all over the world."

"Many of our wonderful buildings which inspired Dickens still stand virtually unchanged

today, making Medway the perfect place to celebrate and explore the great writer's works."

Original cheques, letters and other memorabilia from different periods of Charles Dickens' life, which feature in a collection at Fraser's Autographs in London, will be on show at Eastgate House, Rochester, between February 9-11.

Fraser's has also donated a strand of the author's hair which will be used by the Rochester and Chatham Dickens Fellowship in a lottery or raffle to raise funds for the Dickens Chalet Restoration Fund.

CRIME

Gang who stole Jaguars and BMWs are brought to justice

By Chris Britcher

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A GANG of men who broke into houses while their victims were asleep to steal the keys to expensive cars parked on driveways have been jailed for more than 10 years.

Led by Zammo Wright, who was the instigator and planner, the organised criminal group were responsible for 19 break-ins across Kent and Sussex between September and November, 2010.

They focused on breaking into homes for the keys of high-value cars such as Mercedes-Benz, Jaguar, BMW and Audi.

Their arrest and prosecution is the result of a 16-month investigation by the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate.

Things started to unravel for the defendants when they widened their target area after only offending in Kent and south east London, and went further afield to west Sussex.

Police responding to a report of people acting suspiciously in Ifield, Crawley, in the early hours of November 11, 2010, found Arun Biring in the back of a Ford Fiesta. He was arrested and Darren Nicholson was caught the same day in Kent after officers stopped a stolen BMW.

Following further inquiries by detectives Wright was arrested on November 24, 2010.

Investigations then revealed a fourth offender, Grant Carter, who was subsequently arrested for handling the stolen property.

Appearing at Maidstone Crown Court, Wright, 36, of Little Queen Street, Dartford, was jailed for four-and-a-half years. # Fewer pets being abandoned – but still cause for concern

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KENT is bucking the trend for the number of pets being abandoned by owners.

While the South East has the country's second highest number of offenders after the north – last year more than 5,300 helpless pets were dumped – in Kent the figure is going down.

However, in the first five days of the year, the region is already up to 77 – a shocking average of 15 a day.

In Kent the number of birds dumped went down from 16 in 2009 to six last year, and figures for cats, dogs, exotic animals, fish and mammals all declined. One of the biggest drops was for cats, from 132 in 2009 to 112 last year.

The total number of abandoned animals in Kent was 392 in 2009, compared to 239 last year.

But the RSPCA is warning against complacency and said pet owners must be aware of their responsibilities towards their animals.

DUMPED: Sabrina and Simone

Sometimes, owners at least make an effort to ensure the animals they are getting rid of are found.

But some cats and kittens have been discovered dumped in boxes just laying in the street. Others are left outside RSPCA rehoming centres.

One example is Sabrina and Simone who were found outside the gates of the RSPCA Woodchurch Animal Centre, where they had been dumped in a cardboard box.

Charity workers were horrified to see they were left with no food and water and were both riddled with fleas. Simone had reacted so badly to the fleas that her lips were swollen.

In other cases, people being evicted from their property have rung the RSPCA on the day of eviction to ask for their animals to be taken.

RSPCA Inspector Julia Fuller said other owners are not getting important vet treatment for their pets when they are sick, with lack of money being a prime reason.

According to the Animal Welfare Act from 2006, it is now a legal requirement for pet owners to meet the five basic needs of their animals, including giving proper shelter, food and water, freedom to behave as they should, and health protection.

At last – £20m investment to get superfast broadband all over county

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KENT'S notorious 'not spots' for fast internet broadband cover could soon be turned in to genuine 'hot spots' thanks to a multi-million pound investment from Kent County Council and the Government.

It was Tony Blair's Labour government that promised every home would get a fast internet connection, but so far little has happened for those situated in the county too far away from telephone exchanges and too isolated for fibre optic cables to be run.

With satellite internet failing to launch, it has been left to KCC and Medway Council to lobby for help to get things moving.

Now superfast broadband will now be coming to most parts of Kent after the Government agreed a £10 million package of funding to help make it happen.

Communications minister Ed Vaizey praised the enthusiasm of KCC and its Medway partner. He said as well as £630 million from Britain's government, another £100 million is coming from Europe to roll out the fast web infrastructure around the country.

Cllr Kevin Lynes, KCC cabinet member for regeneration and economic development, said: "This is very welcome news. Improving broadband connections for every part of Kent will be crucial in helping the county's businesses to be as competitive as possible. It will also help communities to stay connected."

"But this is not the end of the story. Kent County Council are providing £10m and, alongside this vital government support, we also need to persuade those who provide the broadband network to work with us in reaching every corner of Kent."

"So there is still work to do in showing the industry that it needs to invest right across the county."

"We won't see the benefits overnight but, in the longer term, this announcement and our partnership will keep Kent fighting fit for the rest of the 21st century."

Now the council is on the hunt for suppliers to spend its money with.

A spokesman said: "We are well aware some rural areas have very poor connections and are doing what we can to reach them with this money. But we don't want to do that at the expense of those in more urban areas that also suffer from a connection that is simply too slow to be of use."

"These days, everyone should have access to a sensible speed over the internet and with this money we intend to ensure Kent residents have the very best."

Meanwhile, Virgin Media has recently announced many of its Kent customers will be seeing a potential doubling of their speed at some stage this year.

The Kent and Medway Local Broadband Plan will reflect the Government's new national broadband targets to make sure superfast broadband is available to 90 per cent of Kent and Medway and at least 2mb speeds to the remaining 10 per cent, and possibly faster in the near future.

£14m government grant swings a council tax freeze at County Hall

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

KENT County Council will be freezing its part of the council tax this year.

The local authority has decided to accept £1.4 million from the Government offered as a one-off payment to keep council tax bills static.

This means residents living in a Band D property will pay £1,047.78p to County Hall for its part of the bill.

Some district councils such as Tunbridge Wells say they will decline the Government grant.

It has decided to raise its Band D bill by 3.3 per cent because taking the freeze grant will lead to a bigger funding gap in the long term.

However, KCC says it can afford to take the money.

Cllr John Simmonds, KCC cabinet member for finance and business support, said: "We are very conscious that householders are facing pressures and even before we decided to take the grant we were expecting not to raise council tax this year. We looked on this grant as a bit of a bonus."

The council's cabinet will be making their final decision on the budget on Thursday.

Cllr Simmonds said: "We have kept back £7.5m of the grant to put in our reserves.

"If we were using it just to cover our ongoing revenue costs then it could be a problem, because like other councils we may well have had to put up our council tax even more next year.

"There are things that come out of the woodwork. We may have six weeks of really bad winter weather which may mean we have a massive spend on gritting the roads and then the knock-on effect of repairing potholes."

However, the council still faces difficult economic pressures. It will get less money from government over the next two years and has to tackle rising inflation and estimates it will have to find £97m pounds of savings this year.

It has already cut more than 600 jobs and expects this to increase to a total of 1,500 posts in the next three to four years.

Despite this, KCC still has a large capital cost programme. It will invest £723m in capital infrastructure over the next three years. The money will be spent on schools and academies, public transport, social care and community facilities.

“69”

This money is a one-off payment that will not help in future years

CLLR GORDON COWAN, LABOUR

County Hall says it is also looking at ways that it can continue to save money in the medium term.

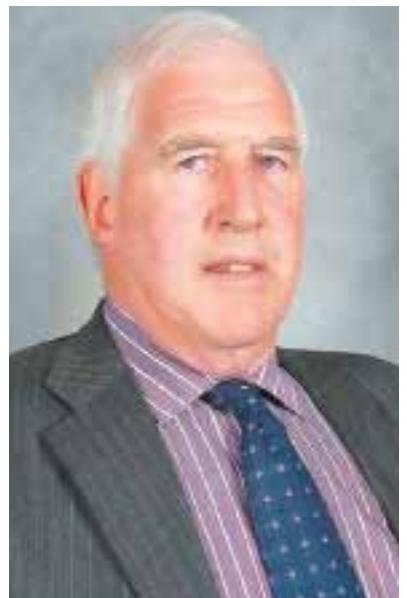

Keeping elderly people in their homes by using new technology such as Telehealth (in which patients' health is monitored at home to avoid them going into residential care) and moves such as using self-service systems in libraries will help reduce costs.

Cllr Simmonds said: "We are in a stage of transition, but just because less money is being spent it does not necessarily mean the public are going to get an inferior service. It might be different from the way we deliver it now but it does not mean services are being slashed."

Cllr Gordon Cowan, from the county council's Labour group, said: "One-off freeze payments are not sustainable within council tax budgets. Many county councils around the country are refusing them. This money is just a one off payment that will not help in future years.

"If you put a 2.5 per cent increase on council tax base rate this year you would be able to spend the £7m the council is putting in reserve for things like youth services and vulnerable adults which people want the money spent on now."

The police and emergency services have not yet decided what their portion of the council tax will be.

Council leader ridiculed over 'shambolic' Green Belt U-turn

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A DRAMATIC U-turn over controversial plans to build on Green Belt land has been made after huge public outcry.

But despite welcoming the reversal, angry campaigners have questioned how much the "shambolic" consultation into the Gravesham plans cost and accused leader of the Labour-run borough council, Cllr John Burden, of a serious error of judgement.

Cllr Burden unveiled the contentious proposals last year, which outlined the development of up to 920 new homes on Green Belt land in areas including Meopham, Istead Rise and Culverstone as part of the area's draft Local Development Framework.

Thousands of people wrote to the council opposing the plans and in a shock U-turn Cllr Burden has recommended they be scrapped.

Cabinet member for environment at Kent County Council Bryan Sweetland called the saga "embarrassing". The Tory questioned how much the process had cost and accused Cllr Burden of "playing politics".

"He must be smarting after one of the most humiliating U-turns we have seen in local politics for many years," he said.

"Knowing his plan to build would not stand up to public examination, he has backed down saying 'I have listened to the people'.

"We should be asking why he decided to drive though this unpopular plan in the first place, when thousands of people told him not to."

Gravesham council had initially defended the strategy, stating the authority had to find a robust plan to help it remain in control of planning issues. However, Cllr Burden said he would recommend a new planning blueprint which would protect the Green Belt.

The sole exception to development in rural areas would be for much-needed housing for the elderly and care home facilities.

"We were obliged to put forward all the potential sites for development – even those we did not favour – and we took the flak from people who misunderstood our position," said Cllr Burden.

"I hope those people – and the many who supported the consultation process – now realise that we have listened to the community and we have taken decisions in their best interests."

Green campaigners from Protect Kent, the county's branch of Campaign to Protect Rural England, welcomed the about turn.

But former Gravesham council leader Mike Snelling, who welcomed the reversal, questioned the cost.

"A totally shambolic consultation which succeeded in creating angst, anger, fear and actual blight in our village communities," he said.

"Goodness knows how much this has all cost – an apology by the council leader to the residents would be entirely appropriate."

BYGONE DAYS: Bristol Fighter biplanes were a regular sight at Detling Airfield during World War One

Airfield of war heroes and Barbara Cartland

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE story of an airfield that was a station for the Royal Naval Air Service in World War One and the RAF during World War Two has been told in a new book.

Detling Airfield is now the site of the Kent Showground, but it was once home to the Sopwith Camel and Bristol Fighter biplanes of the 1914-18 conflict, and the legendary Spitfires, Hurricanes and Mustangs during the war against Hitler's Germany.

Aviation historian Anthony Moor, from Ashford, has written Detling Airfield: A History 1915-1959, which covers its earliest days through its role in World War Two – when several dramatic and tragic events occurred – and finally to more peaceful times, when the airfield became a popular base for recreational gliding.

Kent's North Downs was selected for an airfield as early as 1915 by the Directorate of Works, and levelling the fields was still in progress when the first aircraft arrived in June that year.

At first Detling was home to the Royal Naval Air Service, but by 1917 the Royal Flying Corps had taken it over.

Hangars were built and various units were based there until October 31, 1919, when the airfield was abandoned.

It was not until the late 1930s that the airfield was selected for expansion. It became a great strategic asset for the RAF during World War Two and, consequently, a popular target for Luftwaffe raids with many men and women losing their lives at Detling.

Mr Moor was educated at the Royal Naval School, Tal Handaq, in Malta, and went on to serve a five-year engineering apprenticeship with De Havilland-Hawker Siddeley at Hatfield, working on the Trident airliner.

The author of two previous books – RAF Brenzett ALG 1944, and Throwley Airfield 1917-1919 – he is currently working on a book about flying at Lympne.

"Detling was mainly a station through which aircraft were dispersed to other areas in World War Two," said Mr Moor.

WRITTEN WORD: Aviation historian Anthony Moor

"But it was extremely important during the Dunkirk evacuation when Fleet Air Arm squadrons of Swordfish and Skuas were based there.

"There was a lot of research involved in getting the book together and I used the archives at Kew, as well as the Imperial War Museum, the RAF Museum and the Fleet Air Arm Museum. I also made some personal contacts.

"I spoke to about 20 people who were at Detling during World War Two but, of course, the number of people with first-hand experience is decreasing year by year."

The book contains the unusual story that romantic novelist Barbara Cartland took off in a glider from Detling, as well as the poignant tale of Pilot Officer Joseph Ready.

"He was killed when his Blenheim aircraft crashed on take-off, but I got in touch with his family who live in Canada," said Mr Moor.

"They allowed me to reproduce a letter he'd written just a few days before his death which seems to say that he knew he was going to die.

"So many of those who lost their lives in both wars were just lads in their early 20s or even younger, and that is one of the real tragedy of the two world wars."

• Detling Airfield: A History 1915-1959 is available from branches of Waterstones and from publishers Amberley through orders@amberley-books.com, priced £18.99.

OPINION

Wrong to shred Sir Fred?

Dave Mairs is confused by the honours system and wonders whether doing a bad job should be enough to demote you from 'Sir' to 'Mister'

THE gleeful response of a bay-ing public to the stripping of Fred Goodwin's knighthood suggests the British honours system still means something to our fellow citizens.

Putting aside the feelings of spite or revenge harboured by many who can surely have at best only a passing acquaintance with the rigours of the financial world, there appears to be general agreement that the former chief executive of RBS, the bank he led to ruin and which cost the country more than £45 billion to bail out, does not merit the title 'Sir'.

So who does? It's a question that hit me just a month ago as I blinked disbeliefingly at the TV screen trying to absorb the news that my constituency MP Roger Gale had been knighted.

Sir Roger has held the North Thanet seat since 1983 with a handsome majority. With due deference to Herne Bay, the constituency's principal town is Margate, a place that now epitomises seaside decline.

The title of Britain's most wretched high street brought national headlines, while all those nasty socio-economic indicators like unemployment, wage levels and deprivation continue to show Margate in a wholly gloomy light – despite recent improvements such as Turner Contemporary.

All Sir Roger's fault? Of course not, but he has hardly overseen a glorious period in the town's history. This has happened on his watch. A more demanding electorate and, it must be said, a more critical local press might have put paid to Sir Roger's tenure long before now.

Throughout it all, you wonder that if in his quieter moments Sir Roger raises a glass to the existence Thanet District Council, the local authority that for so long has drawn the ire of many of those it is meant to represent.

Its reputation was dragged through the mud a few years ago as both the former leader and deputy leader were found to have breached the council's code of conduct; a high-profile councillor was convicted of animal cruelty; and another forced by law to resign due to non-attendance at meetings, having spent much time abroad.

It was a woeful time in Thanet's history and, tellingly, three of those involved in the above indiscretions were North Thanet Conservatives – local politicians drawn from Sir Roger's own constituency party.

His perceived public silence over their behaviour was depressing and possibly not much help those trying to talk up Thanet.

Sir Roger has, I am assured, helped constituents with problems; he has performed useful work in the international arena; and I share his stance on animal rights.

But, walking through the shell of Margate high street, or along the faded seafront, or in those parts of Cliftonville that are now more akin to a ghetto than the high-end resort it once was, I do not believe his record as North Thanet MP warrants a knighthood.

Which takes us back to Mr Goodwin. The award of a knighthood in the first place is questionable, but that's irrelevant. He has not been convicted of a crime, the usual reason knighthoods are lost, nor has there been any gruesome personal scandal. Rather, he simply did a poor job in his field of work. But who's to say that doesn't apply to any number of 'Sirs'?

The honours system has always been a law unto itself, but today its workings seem, to me at least, harder than ever to understand.

Assurance is needed on homes insurance

AS IF things weren't bad enough with fears your home could potentially be flooded and your worldly possessions destroyed, now we're being told that from next year insurers are unlikely to touch flood-risk homes with a bargepole or, if they do, they will charge the earth to do it.

No surprise there then. The Government and the insurance industry need to extend their pact to ensure homes are protected and insurance guaranteed. And, even more importantly, when flood defences are built, providing protection for flood-risk properties, insurance companies must make sure this is reflected in their bills rather than hitting long-suffering customers with yet more high costs.

Col Collins not on right track

I WOULD like to comment on Colonel Tim Collins wanting to be elected as the first police and crime commissioner.

First, may I say there is nothing wrong with the current system. It has been tried and tested over the years. Several heads are better than one.

Second, the question I would like to ask him is "who is going to pay for his Kent Police reserve?".

The council cannot afford to lose council tax and Kent Police are trying to save £50 million over the next four years. The only people left to pay for his new ideas are the ratepayers – eg, increases in council tax.

I am a pensioner and if any people need a reduction in council tax it is the pensioners.

Think again Col Collins.

Railways hold key to problem

EXCESSIVE numbers of lorries on long-distance journeys from the Continent undoubtedly burden Kent County Council with extra road maintenance costs (Foreign lorry levy 'must be spent on fixing roads', KoS, January 29).

However, a £10-a-day levy on foreign lorries would, on its own, simply raise money for the Treasury. It would not be enough to reduce the number of lorries on our roads.

KCC leader Cllr Paul Carter is optimistic if he thinks any of the levy would reach Kent Highway Services' budget.

Eurotunnel recently reported to the House of Lords that the Channel Tunnel is used only to 10 per cent of its capacity for freight.

There is also space for freight trains, for instance at night, on Kent's railways. This capacity is left idle simply because the charges offered to freight operators are too high.

Under-use of Kent's railways, and of the Channel Tunnel, for freight could be remedied quickly if the Government used proceeds from a levy on lorries to reduce freight charges on railways in recognition of environmental and social benefits.

The levy should be at a realistic level, considerably more than £10-a-day.

Finally, Kent needs money from the levy not only for road maintenance, but for rail infrastructure such as freight terminals. Not least, the Third Thames Crossing should include a railway line for freight traffic and for much needed extra commuter trains between Kent and London.

IN response to the recent Kent

Remembered article on Pacific Class locomotives, I would like to tell readers about my great-great-grandfather who contributed greatly to the railways.

John Saxby was one of the first apprentices at the Ashford works and trained to be a boilermaker.

Later in his career he was the first person to patent the interlocking rail system which went on to become standard throughout the industry and contributed greatly to the success of the rail network.

As his work was of great value I feel some sort of memorial should be placed in Ashford, especially if plans for a railway museum go ahead.

Bill Saxby, Canterbury

Supermarkets out of shape

LAURA Sandys is a great asset to the political scene in Kent.

She always talks sense, whether about Boris Island or mishapen fruit.

However, it is not the public to blame, it is the supermarkets themselves who insist that every tomato, apple, pear or whatever is the same shape and size as every other.

Personally, I never buy fruit in supermarkets, one gets better quality at a lower price in greengrocers.

Elizabeth Lonkhurst,

Keep out of Kent, Boris

THANK you for including the article on the latest position on the proposed new airport.

Every time I hear the airport proposals being mentioned I get quite angry, so apologies.

My biggest objection is to the influence of the Mayor of London on this decision. I do not understand what right he has to make decisions for Kent.

We did not have a say in his election and cannot make any legal objection to his role as mayor, yet it is our homes and lives which will be most affected by his plans. If he wants a London airport, let him find somewhere in London to put it.

I find it amusing there are already four designated 'London' airports, only one of which is within the area.

Stansted, Gatwick and Heathrow are all a significant distance from the destination of most foreign travellers coming to London. A new airport on the Hoo peninsula would hardly help that situation.

As anyone who has had to commute from Medway to London knows, the present transport links are woefully inadequate to take the current number of travellers. Add an airport full of tourists and workers trying to get into or out of London (and anywhere in between) and the roads will come to a standstill.

The so-called high-speed rail link is only high-speed between Ebbsfleet and Stratford, and still runs on the same lines as the standard trains which are not overly frequent and are often overcrowded. Any plans for an airport would have to include upgrades to the infrastructure, which would widen the devastating effects of the airport along the entire route.

Yes, an airport would provide employment opportunities in an area with a high unemployment rate, but it is certain that many of the new jobs would be filled by people from outside the area with the apparent skills and experience which the locals are not seen to have.

The detriment for those living in the area would also be significant – for example, who wants to buy a house near an airport (assuming your house isn't one that has to be demolished to build the airport or new road)? All this in addition to the significant environmental issues.

I think my daughter made the best argument against the new airport, however. She pointed out that Britain has no money, so why are they considering spending another £70bn they don't have to build a new airport?

I don't claim to be an economist, but the figures just don't add up.

It just has the feeling of being a bit of retail therapy – we're depressed, so let's go out on a spending spree and get ourselves a new toy.

Hornby shares take a tumble

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

SHARES in Hornby have fallen after the firm, which makes Scalextric sets and Airfix models, warned that poor Christmas sales would hurt full-year profits.

The Thanet company said that fewer sales of its high-end train sets during the traditional toy-buying period would drag pre-tax profit expectations down from £7 million to £5million for the 12 months to March 31.

The news knocked 15 per cent from Hornby shares, which fell 18.5 pence to 105 pence.

In a statement to shareholders, senior management said UK sales growth had been "muted" – although overall sales were ahead of the period for last year.

"Sales of higher-ticket Hornby and Scalextric sets before Christmas were disappointing," Frank Martin, Hornby chief executive, said, putting the decline down to "a lack of willingness to spend on relatively high-ticket items".

The warning ended a run of recent positive news for Hornby, which reported an 8.2 per cent increase in first-half profits reported in November.

Hornby, whose brands include Electrotren, Lima, Jouef and Corgi, posted the higher first-half results as a result of London Olympics-themed model trains, as well as the solution to a supply problem in China.

However, the toymaker suffered a similar fate to many UK retailers over the Christmas period as consumers avoided expensive purchases – such as Hornby's East Coast Pullman digital train set that retails for £275. Chairman Neil Johnson said: "The challenging economic environment impacted UK sales negatively pre-Christmas."

"In anticipation of continuing difficult trading conditions, we have adapted our business to offer a wider range of products at lower price points in categories complementary to our core business."

"We maintain an undiminished focus on the development of our core ranges while continuing to broaden our product range, appeal and geographic reach. It is, however, proving extraordinarily difficult to predict sales accurately in these turbulent markets."

"The successful acquisition of a number of important global licences reinforces our mission statement: to be the most successful model, hobby and collectable-toy company in the world."

The company has responded to poor consumer sentiment by introducing cheaper train sets and last week showcased its offerings for 2012 at the London Toy Fair.

New products include Scalextric Star Wars toys to coincide with the reissue of the movies in 3D format, collectable Corgi models costing £1.99 and preschool items based on the TV series Olly The Little White Van.

The profit warning comes in spite of the firm receiving a £1m boost in first-half turnover from Olympic-themed toys, which include a model railway set based on the high-speed Javelin shuttle that will run from Kings Cross station in London to the Olympic park.

Mr Martin said the benefits from the Olympics would continue throughout 2012, contributing "a couple of million" pounds to Hornby's earnings.

Jon Copestake, retail analyst at the Economist Intelligence Unit, said: "Hornby's results reflect the changing nature of demand for toys. Although the Hornby brand is steeped in nostalgia for many adult consumers, the prevalence of console gaming has made it something of an anachronism for younger consumers."

"It is difficult to see how Hornby products can operate as more than collectable or niche items, outside the mainstream, going forward."

STRUGGLE:
Toymaker Hornby has been hit by lower-than-anticipated sales, with shares and profit expectations suffering as a result

GROSS DOMESTIC PRODUCT

Cautious optimism from directors in face of double-dip recession fears

KENT'S company directors say they are "cautiously optimistic" about the economy – despite the worse-than-expected Gross Domestic Product figure.

Commenting on the latest GDP figures, which showed a decline of 0.2 per cent in the fourth quarter of 2011, Andrew Metcalf, vice-chairman of the Institute of Directors' Kent branch, said:

"While the national statistics show cause for concern, we feel the GDP for October to December may not accurately reflect the economic situation in Kent as the feedback we are receiving from our members gives us reason to be cautiously optimistic."

"At our recent IoD Kent MD (Managing Directors) Strategy Forum the consensus was one of growing confidence this quarter as business builds strongly in January."

"There was also a widespread recognition that the Kent business community has to make things happen for itself, investing time and effort in building partnerships and links across the county and beyond."

But other economists remain cautious and have warned the economy could continue to shrink in the early part of this year, causing the UK's first double-dip recession since the 1970s.

Graeme Leach, chief economist at the IoD, said: "We've taken one step towards a double-dip recession, and it's now probably 50-50 as to whether we'll take the second, with a fall in output this quarter as well."

"It's important to stress that the 0.2 per cent fall in GDP is not large and could be reversed."

"The tipping point remains economic developments in the eurozone. If the euro crisis gets worse, sustaining UK recovery looks almost impossible."

FORESTRY AND AGRICULTURE

Risk assessment to help businesses prepare to cope with climate change

A NEW Government initiative could help Kent's land-based businesses cope with climate change, according to an environmental monitoring body.

The Country Land and Business Association (CLA) says the first-ever Climate Change Risk Assessment (CCRA) will highlight key issues.

The CCRA covers 15 sectors, including forestry and agriculture, and sets out the future that farmers and land managers will face, such as changing weather patterns and increased pests and disease.

CLA South East regional director Rupert Ashby said: "This is a crucial and welcome first attempt. Meeting these challenges will require new management skills with support from better technology and guidance to allow forestry and agri-businesses to effectively adapt to climate change."

Mr Ashby said the land-management sector in the South East could make a big contribution towards adapting to climate change and highlighted how farmers and foresters could help.

He said: "The report particularly emphasises the need for more research into the effects and adaptation strategies for the forestry sector. The Government has so far failed adequately to fund forest research, which is working to combat the pests and diseases threatening our trees."

The CLA, with other key bodies, helped the Government develop the forestry and agriculture risk assessments and reviewed the final forestry assessment. The association insisted the Government take a strong approach to developing business opportunities around climate change for both sectors.

Call for action as small firms fear for economy

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

CONFIDENCE among small businesses plummeted last year, according to a new report.

This drop was a result of businesses being hit by high inflation, rising utility bills and reduced consumer spending power, according to the latest findings from the Federation of Small Businesses (FSB) Voice of Small Business Index.

The index, comprising some 1,600 responses from businesses across the UK, recorded a score of 24.5 – the lowest level since the index started in 2010 and a fall of some 15.2 points over the quarter.

Given that business investment is key to creating jobs and supporting the recovery, the ongoing weak sentiment is worrying.

In Kent, the 2011 Autumn FSB Small Business Barometer also showed reduced confidence, with a fall in the proportion of businesses in Kent and Medway responding to the survey forecasting improved performance in 2012, dropping from 70 per cent to 66 per cent.

And, with one in eight (12.6 per cent) of firms expecting a worsening economic situation in the coming three months, the FSB is calling on the Government to act on policies and initiatives already announced to help boost small-business confidence so that they can invest and grow.

While the short-term prospects look weak, an improving inflation outlook will certainly help confidence over the year. Inflation is expected to fall back sharply this year as the impact of 2011's VAT rise lessens, with recent energy price cuts an encouraging sign inflationary pressures are finally easing.

Falling inflation should help cash-strapped consumers and give more room for discretionary spending. Businesses will benefit, too, as the cost pressures of 2011 fade, which should feed into better margins and improved profitability.

Reforms announced by the Government should also help. The FSB has supported many of the policies outlined in the Growth Reviews and the Autumn Statement, such as measures to encourage bank lending to small businesses and boost investment through the seed enterprise investment scheme. Proposed reforms to the planning system and Government procurement contracts to increase small firms' access were steps in the right direction, too, says the FSB.

STRUGGLE: The FSB wants to see Government action, rather than just words, and make some necessary reforms

However, many of these measures will take time. The FSB says the key for all levels of Government is to focus on implementation: small firms need to see action to match the rhetoric and see actions to benefit their businesses and permanently change the business environment for the better.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "The message is clear – things are going to get worse before they get better. But we are hopeful that as the inflationary pressures lessen in 2012, businesses will become more confident. There are some good policy proposals in the pipeline, too."

"However, the Government needs to quickly put in place the actions that it has promised.

"Small firms have heard what the Government has to say but are still waiting to see implementation. We believe that must be the Government's priority: to make 2012 the year of doing, with the aim of creating a dynamic business landscape in which our entrepreneurs can grow and flourish."

FREIGHT

Delivery advice programme is launched ready for the Olympics

A SUPPORT package to help freight operators and their customers continue to operate effectively during the London 2012 Games has been put together by Transport for London.

At the centre of the package, called TfL's Freight Advice Programme, are 230 free workshops aimed at businesses in Games transport 'hot-spot' areas that receive freight deliveries, and those companies that deliver to them.

Included in the list are events in Bexley, Dartford, Maidstone and the Medway towns.

The free workshops run until the end of April. Kent's dates are still to be confirmed.

To apply for a free workshop place, businesses should visit www.tfl.gov.uk/2012.

London's transport commissioner, Peter Hendy, said: "Ensuring London's supermarkets, restaurants and pubs remain stocked this summer will be critical to the overall success of the London 2012 Games.

"Businesses based in transport 'hot-spot' areas that make or receive freight deliveries need to start planning now to ensure they continue to operate effectively – and profitably – next summer.

"Our new programme of workshops and tailored advice for freight operators and their customers greatly enhances the support package already on offer to help businesses of all sizes stay one step ahead during the Games.

"I'd like to urge all businesses in affected areas, and the freight companies that deliver to them, to take advantage of the hundreds of free workshops starting this month and log on to www.tfl.gov.uk/2012 to book a place."

Sarah Bell, lead traffic commissioner for Olympic delivery, said: "The Traffic Commissioners for Great Britain are delighted TfL are offering these seminars and urge operators to take advantage of the opportunity to assist their preparation and planning for the commercial opportunities that the Games will bring.

"The very experienced TfL freight team have worked closely with Traffic Commissioners, the trade associations and other partners to produce a wealth of information in a user-friendly format.

"The seminars will offer a practical insight into how best to use that information and ask questions directly relevant to particular business sectors."

Kate Gibbs at the Road Haulage Association said: "We welcome this move by TfL to help haulage operators at such a critical time and we shall certainly be urging our members to take advantage of the practical advice and information available.

"An effective, cost-effective and efficient transport network is crucial to the success of the Games – this initiative will ensure operators are fully prepared."

Experts call for more, not less, work experience for our teens

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE Forum of Private Business has expressed concern at Government proposals to scrap mandatory work experience for GCSE pupils.

The not-for-profit support group warned in a letter to the Department for Education – which is consulting on plans to remove the statutory requirement for Key Stage 4 (14- to 16-year-old) pupils to complete at least two weeks of work experience – that doing so will further reduce the number of work-ready youngsters entering the job market.

The Forum said that, far from removing the current provision, the Government should be looking at expanding work-experience placements to further ready youngsters on the brink of starting their working lives.

Head of campaigns Jane Bennett said: "We believe work experience is vital in helping to prepare young people for the world of work."

"There's no better place than a proper working environment to test out a career choice, and it's also by far the best arena for young adults to learn the skills so critical to success."

If small businesses in the private sector are to lead job creation and tackle unemployment, they need a better labour

VITAL: The Forum of Private Business says experience is vital for preparing children for the workplace force that includes young, ambitious and talented individuals who know what it takes to thrive in the workplace.

Our training and skills-panel research shows members already believe young people in the UK are largely unprepared for the workplace. New-starters frequently arrive with few or no basic skills and need guidance on even simple things such as appropriate dress code and punctuality – the very basics of a work ethic.

Business-owners frequently point out that young people are taught no first aid or health and safety skills, and together these types of inadequacies make them very resource-intensive.

"Our research with businesses also identifies poor attitude as a common problem. Class hours and a lenient view of absence during their schooling often means many new-starters are unwilling to work unsocial hours, get up early or even make it in on time."

Owners have also cited instances of new recruits refusing to carry out menial tasks they considered beneath them.

"Quite frankly, we need more work experience, not less, to help break down these types of immature mindsets and attitudes."

"Work-linked learning can also be extraordinarily powerful in engaging students who are bored or turned off by conventional classroom teaching."

"It's hard to see how any plan to reduce work experience for school pupils fits with the Government's pledge to significantly increase the number of apprenticeships."

The Forum's letter does, however, welcome the Government's proposals to improve vocational programmes for young people, which it says is vital to fulfil employee requirements of small firms. It also welcomes plans for improved links between educators and local business leaders.

RECOGNITION: DFDS's Chris Newey is thrilled by the award

AWARD

DFDS on top of the world

DFDS Seaways has been named the World's Leading Ferry Operator at the World Travel Awards in Doha, Qatar.

The cruise-ferry operator fought off competition from New Zealand, the Baltic Sea and a number of European rivals to claim the trophy.

More than 210,000 travel-industry professionals and consumers voted in this year's World Travel Awards, which are recognised worldwide as the Oscars of the travel industry and the premier industry-awards programme.

The ferry company puts the success down to its quality onboard offering and exceptional customer service, as well as its comprehensive passenger route network, which incorporates English Channel, North Sea and Baltic routes, making it a convenient way to access Europe and Scandinavia.

Chris Newey, passenger director for the English Channel, DFDS Seaways, said: "This award is great news and recognition of our excellent customer service and value for money across all of our routes, and we are delighted to receive this accolade."

"In addition to this award, we were also named by the consumer body Which? as its only Recommended Provider for ferry travel, thanks to the company's ongoing commitment to quality and the hard work and dedication of our staff in providing an exceptional experience for our customers onboard and ashore."

This year's regional heats of the World Travel Awards included events at Dubai (Middle East); Antalya, Turkey (Europe); Sharm el Sheik, Egypt (Africa and Indian Ocean); Bangkok, Thailand (Asia and Australasia); and Montego Bay, Jamaica (Caribbean and the Americas).

The awards, which were founded in 1993, acknowledge excellence across all sectors of the global travel, tourism and hospitality industry.

TAX RETURNS

Helping to get you through the confusion of red tape

IT IS now possible to get help when filling in your corporation tax returns.

From April 1 last year, all corporation tax returns have to be filed online with the computation and accounts attachments in a new iXBRL format devised by HM Revenue & Customs.

Many businesses are still finding the conversion cost prohibitive when using their regular tax advisers, especially if their existing accounts have been produced in Word or Excel format.

To help overcome the problems, McBrides accountancy, based in Nexus House, Sidcup, has developed a dedicated in-house iXBRL team.

Using a specialised software-supplier, the team is able to offer a much more cost-effective alternative, which will ensure that all accounts are tagged correctly, irrespective of how complex they might be.

It then tests the filing system, using HMRC's own testing facility, so that clients can rest assured their returns have been correctly filed.

Partner Andrew Warren, left, head of the McBrides iXBRL team, said: "iXBRL sounds frightening but in reality is a way of translating financial information into an electronic format. Each item is given an individual tag or code, which is readable by a computer when displayed in web-page format (HTML)."

"From April 1, it has been compulsory for all companies, clubs, societies and associations to file their corporation-tax returns online using the iXBRL data standard. PDF attachments or paper are no longer acceptable. This is proving a burden to some organisations, not to mention prohibitively expensive for the smaller clubs and societies."

To ease the transition, McBrides says that its package is being offered at very competitive rates.

ACCOUNTS

Stay prepared and avoid being stuck under stigma of red light

A PILOT initiative by HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) to target businesses with badly-organised books and records is being extended as part of the Government's latest tax clampdown, accountants have warned.

The traffic light-themed initiative sees HMRC officers visit businesses to check a random sample of their sales, purchases and expenses records. Depending on the quality of the records, the business is awarded a red, amber or green 'light'.

Businesses with good records will be given a green light and no further action will be taken. Those whose books contain minor inadequacies will receive an amber light, advice on what action to take and, potentially, a follow-up meeting.

John Moore, business services partner at Maidstone-based DSH Chartered Accountants and Business Advisors, said businesses should go out of their way to avoid a red light.

He said: "The red light means your records contain significant failures and will lead to a further visit from Revenue and Customs and a potential £3,000 fine."

"We are therefore advising firms to apply best practice to their business accounting procedures to ensure they are not stopped in their tracks by a red light."

"Companies can take a free business-records test on the Business Link website."

"The 'Find out what records you should be keeping on a business' questionnaire will help businesses evaluate the adequacy of their records."

"They can take the test and discuss any shortcomings with us or alternatively allow us to undertake a critical review of their records ourselves."

Apprenticeships are good news all round

THANET College is calling on all businesses in east Kent to take on an apprentice this year in an attempt to tackle the continued rise in youth unemployment, which has led to Thanet having the highest rate of youth unemployment in the South East.

The numbers of young people who are unemployed have reached the million mark, the highest in 20 years, as it's becoming tougher and tougher for young people to enter the job market.

One way in which local businesses can take on a young person is through an apprenticeship, where the employer gains someone bespoke to their needs and in a cost-effective way, and the employee gains on-the-job training, vital job-specific skills and qualifications crucial to their career progress.

Apprenticeships can bring increased productivity and develop a workforce needed both now and into the future, bringing fresh talent and new thinking and filling skills gaps.

Thanet College's business division, Training Solutions, can offer assistance in achieving this.

David Foley, chief executive of Thanet and East Kent Chamber of Commerce, says that Training Solutions is making taking on an apprentice easier than ever.

"Nine out of 10 companies in Thanet have fewer than 20 workers.

"In the past, these firms may have dismissed the opportunity to take on an apprentice as being too cumbersome, too time-consuming, or too much like hard work.

"With the procedures being outlined by organisations such as Training Solutions at Manston, the administrative burden is significantly reduced so that even quite small enterprises can see an immediate benefit.

"We urge companies in Thanet to consider the new apprenticeship schemes and so discover how their operations, margins and future prospects can be improved with the addition of an on-site apprentice," he said.

Thanet College recently launched its first-ever Apprenticeship Academy, offering positions that provide training in a real workplace across the college, including in business administration and catering.

The initiative aims to run an enhanced apprentice recruitment campaign throughout 2012, seeking to ensure businesses are more aware of the advantages of taking on a young apprentice.

The academy's launch is tying in with National Apprenticeship Week, taking place from February 6-10, an annual event which aims to highlight the wide range of apprenticeships available throughout different sectors, presenting the numerous benefits that come with it.

Jo Gideon, chairman of the Thanet Works Board, thinks that apprenticeships are a fantastic way to start a career.

"Apprenticeships are a great way of giving people a combination of work experience and the chance to study for nationally recognised qualifications," she said.

Thanet College is committed to demystifying and simplifying the process of employing an apprentice and has a dedicated employer-engagement team at Training Solutions.

East Kent has a high-skilled and committed workforce, and there has never been a better time to take on an apprentice.

STARTER MOTORS: Karl has enjoyed his time working at the garage

Karl showing drive to succeed

MOTOR vehicle apprenticeships are on offer at Victoria Volkswagen and have been a great success with those looking to improve their experience in auto work.

Karl Arthur works as an apprentice at Victoria Volkswagen Garage, Broadstairs, and gained a City & Guilds Motor Vehicle Level 2 at Thanet College. He is now working on his Level 3 Institute of Motor Industry qualification.

He said: "The highlight of my college experience is being accepted on this apprenticeship.

"It's such a great opportunity as it allows me to experience the real working environment while gaining my qualifications, allowing me to understand the trade and perform to my full potential, at work and college.

"Being accepted by such a reputable garage was also a massive achievement, as I am trusted to keep the professional image which they thrive on."

De-mystifying Apprenticeships

Taking on an apprentice can be one of the most cost effective and rewarding ways of employing a new member of staff.

Businesses report that skills shortages are an even greater threat to future success than other factors such as the economic downturn or rising fuel costs. Apprentices are a proven way in which to address these skills needs.

Businesses across the country large and small, from both the private and public sector agree that employing an apprentice can significantly improve profitability and productivity, introduce new ideas and help develop a motivated and loyal workforce. If over 130,000 businesses already employ apprentices - isn't it about time you found out how they can benefit your business as well?

Why not drop in to see us during National Apprenticeship Week and chat through your skill and staff needs. We will attempt to dispel some of the myths and misconceived barriers surrounding the scheme, helping you go forward to greater success.

'Youth Contracts' offer hope to our many unemployed young

THE Government has recently announced plans to invest £1 billion to help tackle the growing problem of youth unemployment.

With this comes the introduction of the 'Youth Contract' to provide apprenticeships and work experience for almost half a million young people over the next three years.

The initiative plans to help businesses give jobs to young people aged 18-24, and also help unemployed young people to get a work experience place.

For businesses that take on a young person registered on the Work Programme of Jobcentre Plus, there will be 160,000 job subsidies available worth up to £2,275 each.

There will be an extra 20,000 incentive payments, worth £1,500 each, available to employers that take on young people as apprentices.

Some 250,000 work experience places will be on offer over the three-year period to every 18-to 24-year-old who requests one. More regular meetings with Jobcentre advisers, and a National Careers Service interview, are also part of the package of new measures.

A total of £150 million of support will also be targeted at some of the UK's most vulnerable 16-to 17-year-olds. The programme will aim to assist some of Britain's one million NEET's (16- to 24-year-olds not in employment, education or training) into education, an apprenticeship or a job with training.

Thanet College's Training Solutions supports these new initiatives, aiming to offer businesses the help they need when taking on apprentices, simplifying the process for both employers and the apprentices themselves.

South Thanet MP Laura Sandys supports the initiative and when asked about the Youth Contract she said "This initiative was critical in enabling young people who are struggling to secure their step into the jobs market gain vital experience of the workplace".

Ms Sandys hopes the Youth Contract would also help encourage businesses to consider taking on a young person either for work experience or as an apprentice.

She said: "The workplace is a very different environment in its demands than that of education and training, and young people need to be given the opportunity to experience this for themselves.

"The Youth Contract will help provide life- and work-

START: Employees are urged to join Youth Contract scheme relevant skills and knowledge that will assist young people as they go forward in seeking and securing future job opportunities, something sadly missing at the moment."

With levels of youth unemployment continuing to rise, she urged all businesses in Kent to consider responding to the opportunities offered via the Youth Contract and contribute to improving this situation.

Students find joining academy a truly rewarding experience

THANET College launched its new Apprenticeship Academy on January 16 in its Bay View Restaurant.

The first-ever group was handed some nice extras that come from being an apprentice at the college, including lunch vouchers worth £2.75 a day, a £20 voucher for the college's Trilogy Salons and up to £100 clothing allowance for any work clothes needed. They also received a free netbook computer and pen drive, which they can keep on completion of their apprenticeship.

The eight new apprentices were also informed of the benefits they are entitled to, such as careers advice and support throughout their apprenticeship, as well as the opportunity to attend business events outside college.

Charlie Frewin, who works as a business-administration apprentice in the technology department, was pleased with the benefits he and his fellow apprentices received.

He said: "I'm really enjoying my apprenticeship at the college, and it's great to receive the netbook. It will help me get on with both work and studying."

The new academy aims to give apprentices the opportunity to gain hands-on experience and learn job-specific skills while they study to gain vital qualifications.

Kirsty Bryant, head of Training Solutions, said the academy would hold valuable benefits for those taking part.

She said: "The new Apprenticeship Academy at Thanet College is recognition of earning while learning, and the support that is needed from the employer to ensure that an apprenticeship is a development programme with benefits. The apprentices will work on projects together for the benefit of themselves, the college and the community."

Helping to develop our future workforce

THANET College has been confirmed as a partner to Cogent – the UK's industry skills body for chemicals, pharmaceuticals, nuclear, oil and gas, petroleum and polymer businesses – working on the development of a new Higher Apprenticeship in Science, a move that is set to provide opportunities for young people across the east of the county.

The course will allow students a greater chance to progress in education and academia.

Christine Sakhardande, Cogent's programme manager for the professional science technicians' programme, said: "Our vision is to build a critical mass of professional science technicians across all science-related sectors."

"The new Higher Apprenticeship in Science will provide an opportunity for school- and college-leavers to develop on-the-job skills and follow a progression route that can lead on to graduate status."

"The new vocational programme will also offer existing technicians an accelerated accreditation scheme leading through to the new Science Council's scheme, which offers registration as a Registered Science Technician at Level 3 leading to Registered Scientist at Level 5."

"We are delighted to be working with Thanet College to help to develop the highly-skilled science workforce that will support economic growth in Kent."

The Leadership & Management Higher Apprenticeship has been developed to support those working as managers, senior managers, heads of department, directors and those working in a range of other senior management positions.

The Management Apprenticeship programmes have seen a steady increase in learners since their initial development and the apprenticeship is in the top 20 frameworks.

The apprenticeship programme has been designed to provide flexible and portable qualifications which meet the current and future needs of employers of all sizes and across all sectors.

The framework includes Management Level 5 NVQ and Diploma in Management Level 5 technical certificate, an Employment Rights and Responsibilities workbook and Key/Functional Skills at Level 3 where required.

There are interactive workshops at the Training Solutions Manston Business Centre, with the NVQ assessed in the workplace.

Both qualifications can be completed with Thanet College for the small price of £500 as an introductory price.

Higher Apprenticeship in Business Administration Level 4 is also coming soon to the college.

Some 4.5 million people help to keep businesses running in the public, private and not-for-profit sectors.

This includes registered directors, company and chartered secretaries, general administrators and specialist administrators who, in addition to general administration skills, also need sector-specific knowledge to fulfil job roles such as legal or medical secretaries.

This new Level 4 Higher Apprenticeship will be launched in the summer, with enrolments commencing in September.

Thanet College is about to start work with City and Guilds on the design and delivery models of this new Higher Apprenticeship.

Level 5 Diploma in Leadership and Management in Health and Social Care and Children's and Young People's Services.

Level 5 qualifications are mandatory for managers in health and social care and childcare; the Higher Apprenticeship would provide the necessary assessment and accreditation of the range of skills and knowledge to prove competency in this area.

Learn the benefits of taking on an apprentice at college events

KENT employers interested in taking on an apprentice have an opportunity to learn more about the business benefits of apprenticeships during the fifth National Apprenticeship Week.

Sheppen College is hosting a breakfast event for Swale employers on Thursday, February 9. Organised by Job Centre Plus, in partnership with Canterbury College, the event takes place from 8am to 10am.

It will include an opportunity for networking and a chance for employers to learn more about apprenticeships, the frameworks available locally and the benefits that can be gained by recruiting a young person.

All employers in Kent and Medway are invited to attend the 'Get with Apprenticeships' employer event at Mid Kent College's Medway Campus in Gillingham on the same day from 11am to 2pm.

Hosted by Mid Kent College and facilitated by KATO (Kent Association of Training Organisations), the event will be introduced by keynote speaker Vic Grimes, director of the National Apprenticeship Service, London and South East, who will talk about the exciting incentives available for employers.

Kent training providers will also be on hand to discuss and advise on training requirements.

Statistics show that more than 80 per cent of those employers who employ apprentices agree they make their workplace more productive.

An apprentice can bring fresh ideas to a business, reduce training costs, avoid future skills gaps and give employers the opportunity to 'grow their own' managers.

Apprenticeships are not limited to new employees, so existing members of staff may also be eligible for apprenticeship programmes.

Government funding is available to meet training costs and flexible training opportunities are structured to meet business needs.

To reserve a place at the Sheppen event, email paul.norris1@jobcentreplus.gsi.gov.uk, or for the 'Get with Apprenticeships' employer event email info@kato-training.com.

You're safe in the knowledge that GSL is guarding you

THE Gurkha Services Links Ltd makes it its business to provide professional, highly-trained ex-British Army guards, protecting premises and people throughout London and Kent.

Every one of its staff is individually selected and trained to meet the specific business needs of clients. The team recognises that its personnel are responsible not only for security of any site but they also have an important role to play as representative of your company when meeting and dealing with visitors.

All members of this crack team are trained to standards well above the industry norm, initially attending the four-day induction course carried out in-house, followed by on-site training to ensure they are fully equipped for their role.

GSL can also provide mobile patrols to locations that are recognised to be at risk but do not warrant a permanent guarding presence.

As part of the service, each officer is issued with keys for the customer's premises and carries out an agreed number of inspections on each site at random intervals.

The patrol also performs a variety of additional duties for the benefit of the client, including liaising with cleaning companies, maintenance staff or other contractors to allow and supervise site access for essential out-of-hours workers.

All patrol vehicles are fitted with tracking devices that allow real-time monitoring and reporting 24 hours per day. In addition, site visits are verified by hand-held data recorders.

GSL offers a range of services, including security, general cleaning and a variety of other office actions for both large and small businesses and domestic residential clients, staying strictly to its beliefs of integrity, reliability and dedication.

The group also offers GSL Alarm Response and Key Holding services, managing alarm response and key-holding requirements from lock-and-unlock service to alarm activation, relieving employees from having to make unnecessary journeys at unsociable times... not to mention the possible risk of having to deal with an intruder on the premises.

There is a strong commitment to delivering service excellence, a philosophy that runs through the organisation, from the chairman through to each trained security officer.

Training, courses and careers

College open day for apprentices

CANTERBURY College is running a series of activities to celebrate National Apprenticeship Week, ending with an open day from midday-6pm on Friday, February 10.

At the open day there will be a stall where people can get practical advice and guidance about joining one of the college's apprenticeship training programmes, which include mechanical engineering, health and social care, childcare, accounting and dental nursing.

Advice will also be available from course tutors.

Some courses have rolling start dates, meaning people can apply for them at the open day, and the college will be holding taster sessions of all its apprenticeship courses throughout Apprenticeship Week.

Through apprenticeships, young people gain on-the-job training alongside studying for qualifications.

Depending on the type of role, apprenticeships usually last between one and two years, give young people a firm footing within a company, and some can also lead to a degree level qualification at university.

The college plans to launch more apprenticeships this year, including new higher level apprenticeships.

There will be stands and displays showcasing A-level, BTEC and Higher Education courses available at the college.

Water firm takes on new trainees

A DOZEN young people have taken their first steps in a new career, thanks to Southern Water which has launched a new water supply and distribution apprenticeship to train inspectors and water supply process operators who will join its operations team.

The apprentices, from Kent, Sussex, Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, are studying for an NVQ in water engineering which will be enhanced by placements with the company's leakage, distribution and supply teams.

As well as the 12 new apprentices, Southern Water is also putting 12 members of staff who joined the company within the last year through the NVQ training.

They will all study part-time at one of three Southern Water offices around the South East region and put into practice what they have learned while at their sites.

Southern Water's Don Winzer, who has helped organise the training, knows first-hand the benefits of an apprenticeship as he began his career as a trainee 30 years ago.

He said: "We have made sure that we brought in people with a strong work ethic who want to succeed and build a career for themselves."

Brewer helps jobless learn vital new skills

BREWER Shepherd Neame has teamed up with Jobcentre Plus to give jobseekers aged 18-24 the skills and experience to equip them for the world of work.

The company has already helped three young people to develop a range of skills, including driving a forklift truck, at its distribution centre on the outskirts of Faversham.

Now warehouse manager Tony Berllaque is set to interview a fresh batch of candidates at Sittingbourne Jobcentre for the chance to take part in another eight-week work experience scheme during the spring.

Mr Berllaque said: "This initiative gives young people a true experience of work. If they are successful, they leave with a reference, a pallet truck licence and a forklift licence."

Under the scheme, candidates continue to receive their regular benefits, while working for a maximum of 30 hours a week for a maximum of eight weeks.

Mr Berllaque said: "They are asked to attend with steel toe-capped boots and a high visibility jacket and work six hours a day, Monday to Friday."

"We give them a basic company induction and health and safety training and they start with 'housekeeping' – straightening pallets and tidying up generally, before moving on to 'picking' – preparing cases of beer for dispatch.

"They move on to using a pallet truck and if they show aptitude with this and suitable commitment, they take the three-day forklift truck course.

"We've had three guys aged 22, 19 and 18 who have seen it through and left us with good references and mechanical handling equipment licences."

Jobcentre Plus operations manager Kevin Payne said Kent currently has 10,875 young people aged 18-24 out of work, including 1,220 in the Swale district.

"We really appreciate this interest from local employers," he said. "Shepherd Neame is a reputable company, with a well organised manufacturing and distribution operation and thorough in-house training.

"It is a big step from school to the world of work and some of these 18 to 24-year olds haven't worked before. Shepherd Neame has given them an opportunity to experience a professional environment, to work alongside role models and to boost self-confidence.

"This kind of work experience can make young people feel a lot more positive about selling themselves to a future employer."

Jobcentre Plus is organising an Employer Breakfast Event to discuss apprenticeships, work experience and work trials.

The free event is on Thursday, February 9, at Sheppeney College, Bridge Road, Sheerness, from 8-10am.

For details, call Jobcentre Plus employee adviser Paul Norris on 01795 562679 or email paul.norris1@jobcentrefplus.gsi.gov.uk.

The young engineers of the future taking on the Faraday Challenge

BUDDING young engineers have been taking up the task of researching, designing and building solutions to real engineering problems.

Last week, King Ethelbert School in Birchington hosted a Faraday Challenge Day. Teams from Hartsdown Technology College in Margate, Ursuline College in Westgate-on-Sea, Marlowe Academy in Ramsgate and Dane Court Grammar School in Broadstairs attended.

The event was part of the In-situation of Engineering and Technology's (IET) Faraday education programme which includes 55 challenge days across the UK.

The Faraday Challenge Days aim to encourage more young people to study and consider exciting and rewarding careers in science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) by encouraging creativity, innovation and problem-solving skills.

Each event involves six school teams each made up of six 12-13 year old students studying science, design technology, and maths.

Dee Halil, IET education manager, said: "Students taking part in the Faraday Challenge Days experience hands-on design and practical work giving them a peek into the life of a real engineer, the variety of engineering and the central role it plays in our everyday lives. We are confident this will challenge perceptions of engineers and the jobs they do."

University students showing off new tunnel visions

FOUR students from University for the Creative Arts (UCA) at Rochester have won prizes for a live project they undertook with Eurotunnel Le Shuttle.

Third-year BA (Hons) design, branding and marketing students were asked to develop a marketing strategy for the company's Frequent Traveller product as part of their final project.

Students behind the four best concepts were invited to pitch their ideas to senior staff at Eurotunnel's Folkestone headquarters.

Deborah Elliott, Eurotunnel senior product manager, said: "The concepts proved both memorable and campaignable.

"They were researched thoroughly and with excellent consideration given to integrating a range of initiatives in support of their main idea."

First prize of a premium trip to the Continent was awarded to Hayley Hedges for her "compelling, highly polished concepts that she presented with flair".

Ioanna Theiakou won second prize, with Chinidma Ufomadu and Jonathan Rees winning runners-up prizes of a day/overnight trip.

FINALISTS: University for the Creative Arts course leader Jane Armstrong with students Chinidma Ufomadu, Ioanna Theiakou, Hayley Hedges, Jonathan Rees and Eurotunnel's Deborah Elliott

Course leader Jane Armstrong, said: "The live project is an integral part of our final year programme in which students undertake briefs set by industry.

"This was a demanding project, asking students to research and understand the dynamics of integrated communications and deliver highly creative yet realistic outcomes.

"I am delighted that they have demonstrated their commercial acumen, and feel confident that this project will help launch their careers after graduating this summer."

Schools encouraged to tune into benefits pupils gain from singing

KENT Music and Sing Up are joining forces to launch a pilot learning scheme in spring to improve singing in schools.

They will investigate how primary schools use singing as a learning tool and identify any teacher training requirements to make improvements.

Other aims include cross-school training, networking, shadowing opportunities, and partnering schools to share strengths and expertise.

Initially, schools in Canterbury,

Tonbridge and surrounding areas will be taking part, and if successful, the scheme will be rolled out to other parts Kent and the UK.

Sing Up will be teaching some of the schools a repertoire of songs to be performed at the Canterbury Primary School Recorder Festival on March 27.

Kent Music development manager Laura Callaghan said: "It is well documented that singing is good for children and can help improve numeracy, motor skills, language development, health, and boost confidence. Sadly, singing has disappeared from many primary school classrooms. The Sing Up scheme aims to support schools and teachers to use singing as a valuable and fun learning tool for pupils."

For details about registering a school with the scheme contact Laura Callaghan on 01622 358437 or email lcallaghan@kent-music.com.

A truly extraordinary school

I have the enormous privilege of being the Headmaster of The Duke of York's Royal Military School, the only non-selective, fully boarding state school in the country.

The school has adopted a military ethos in its approach to education for over 200 years as we recognise that children in all walks of life thrive in schools where traditional values such as self-discipline, self-reliance, spirituality, leadership and respect for others are present. What makes our community fun, vibrant and successful is a fusion of these military values with the other elements present in all good schools.

Young people who are kept busy and given the opportunities to develop and prove their self-worth really do excel. This year 93% of our pupils achieved 5 passes at GCSE or equivalent (A*-C) including English and Maths. The average figure in Kent is just over 50% in way of comparison.

Every pupil passed 5 subjects with 42% of these passes being at A/A* grade. The vast majority of our 2011 leavers (95%) went to their first University of choice. More recently a pupil has been offered a place to read Mathematics at Cambridge University.

A good school is about more than just what is learnt in the classroom; sport and outdoor pursuits continue to play a leading role in the lives of all of our pupils and over 65 students received Duke of Edinburgh Awards this year. Our acclaimed military band continues to perform at events, and members of our talented senior choir recently appeared on local and national TV.

This year we have continued to work in partnership with a range of different schools locally, nationally and internationally. Our school and those in the Astor Federation of Schools have continued to forge close ties. Most notably was the involvement of pupils in a critically acclaimed production of "Cabaret" both in Dover and Virginia, USA which was put on by a joint American, Russian and British cast.

We are currently busy planning how to best spend a government grant of £24.9m to enhance the lives of present and future pupils in the school. These are exciting times indeed for the school which charges just £9,750 per year for our boarding (education is paid for by the state).

I personally welcome all visitors and encourage you to visit us.

Mrs Louise Moelwyn-Hughes St Edmund's School Canterbury

St Edmund's is a distinctive and historic boarding and day co-educational school where a family atmosphere is fostered, individuals are valued, the spiritual element is explored, and pupils enjoy a rich academic and cultural experience. We are committed to producing happy and successful students who can access a high quality education, while enjoying a wealth of stimulating and exciting extra-curricular activity. Set within a beautiful and extensive green field site affording spectacular views of the city and Cathedral of Canterbury, St Edmund's not only enjoys a stunning location, but also offers a happy, vibrant and creative environment within a supportive community.

The school offers a nurturing, safe and challenging environment where an emphasis is placed upon academic rigour and extra-curricular involvement. Our extra-curricular provision is broad and yet allows for expertise in each individual area. Our tradition of housing and educating the choristers of Canterbury Cathedral brings much to the richness and diversity of our community.

Academic standards are set high. Our dedicated and talented teaching and support staff work alongside students to encourage them to develop into caring, resourceful and confident young men and women who are well equipped to tackle the demands of the modern world.

As the Head of St Edmund's, I relish the opportunity to further enhance the already strong academic profile of the school, and to encourage all pupils to find their strengths in the many and various extra-curricular pursuits on offer, whether that be in the performing and visual arts, in music, in sport, or beyond.

We welcome pupils from all over Kent - our transport service helps day pupils travel to and from school and, for those pupils who live further away, we are proud of our thriving boarding communities in both the Junior and Senior schools which offer a 'home from home' family environment for boys and girls ages 7 - 18.

St Edmund's produces remarkable young people who enjoy the challenge of discovering and making the most of their talents. If you are looking for a nursery place as the first stage of your son or daughter's schooling or are thinking about the next step in their educational career I hope that you will consider St Edmund's and visit us soon.

UK's Longest serving head to retire

After 26 years at the helm of King's Rochester, Head Master, Dr Ian Walker will be retiring in July

Under his leadership, King's became co-educational in 1992 and this greatly changed the nature of the school. Ian Walker comments: "Maturation of King's came about with the advent of girls and I am really pleased about that and glad that I did it."

Dr Walker also founded King's Pre-Preparatory School allowing pupils to join King's from the age of three and continuing their education, unbroken, all the way up to 18.

The Pre-Prep and Nursery are now housed in Chadlington House, built with the assistance of a generous donation from King's old boy, Lord Chadlington of Dean.

Over the years, Dr Walker has initiated many building projects and improvements to the school's facilities and in particular the boarding houses have benefited and are popular for day-pupils to move in for concentrated study during public exams. Other additions include the 'Bob Doubles' café which is open to pupils and staff as well as parents, providing them with the perfect meeting place before the weekly Cathedral services to which they are always invited. Also, Dr Walker campaigned to raise an impressive £350,000 for a 25m indoor heated pool; this is used extensively for swimming lessons, galas and also kayaking training.

Foreign language provision is a key part of King's education with pupils as young as three learning German as part of their everyday lessons. All languages taught may be studied up to A Level and it was thanks to Dr Walker that the school was awarded two substantial grants from the Wolfson Foundation to build language laboratories enabling the teaching of a broad range of languages including German, French, Russian and Latin.

However, whilst Dr Walker has made many improvements to the facilities at the school during his headship, he says: "Buildings are just the shell of a school. The people in it are its soul. King's pupils are invariably lovely, good company; thoroughly decent people - culturally, spiritually and morally - and this is the real joy of the job for me.

"King's always was, and continues to be, a wonderful school. I will miss the pupils and the enjoyment of the company of my colleagues, but I leave it in good shape and I can't imagine handing it over to a better man . . ."

Mr Jeremy Walker will take up the post of Principal at King's Rochester in September 2012 and he will be at the school's Open Morning on Saturday March 3 from 9.30am - 12noon

Tel: 01634 888590 www.kings-rochester.co.uk

Top results again from King's Rochester pupils

The publication of the latest government league tables last week gave cause for celebration at King's Rochester.

King's A Level pupils who collected their results last summer achieved an average point score per examination entry of 238.5 outstripping all local grammar schools and the national average of 216.2. The students who achieved these wonderful grades last summer are now studying top universities across the UK including five at Oxford and Cambridge and others at outstanding Russell Group establishments such as Durham, Bristol, Liverpool, Imperial College, London and Leeds.

GCSE candidates did the school proud too. Their achievements put them above all the Kent broad-ability, independent schools with 92% of pupils gaining "5 good GCSEs" or more.

Head Master, Dr Ian Walker who retires this summer after 26 years of distinguished service to the school, said: "I am delighted that King's pupils have achieved another crop of outstanding results at GCSE and A Level - and especially in my last year as Head Master! I am, however, not surprised that King's has ranked so highly in the latest league tables. Such results are the culmination of solid hard work by our broad-ability pupils and their teachers. They are the proof that we serve our youngsters and their futures far better by offering them traditional subjects taught by supportive, inspirational staff. Dumbing down a curriculum with a plethora of 'Mickey Mouse' vocational subjects serves no-one and the top academic results achieved year on year by King's pupils prove that".

To hear more about the outstanding examination results at King's Rochester, visit the school's Open Morning on Saturday March 3 at 9.30am to 12 noon.

THE INTERVIEW

Marcus Patrick

Hollyoaks Ben bares all

Heartthrob actor Marcus Patrick tells Joe Bill about the reality of breaking into TV, panto and why he's wearing those tiny pink pants

AGED just 19, Marcus Patrick was on television five nights a week surrounded by good-looking women and envied by teenage boys across the country.

Starring as pin-up fireman Ben Davies in Hollyoaks, the actor burst on to the small screen, where he stayed as a main character of the soap for more than seven years.

After a short panto stint in his home town of Portsmouth, the 32-year-old has bagged a part in a new musical to tour the UK, Wildboyz.

He said: "If you wanted to compare it to something, it would be the Full Monty, but it has additional current affairs within it. The characters we play are celebrities and are not working class – it is very much The Full Monty but of this era and with a celebrity twist."

"People are in the market for that sort of thing at the moment with this reality obsession going on. The cast are pretty much playing sent-up versions of themselves, so I would be Marcus Patrick the actor in the show."

Patrick is not the only well-known face in Wildboyz, with reality veteran Alex Reid and Danny Young from Coronation Street all signing up to parade around in pants.

The show is based on the stars heading out for a stag-do in Bali before their plane is diverted to a cheap Spanish hotel in Ibiza. And when the international male-strip group doesn't turn up for a hen party, the spotlight turns to the celebs to save the day.

Patrick said: "In that way this will give the show some longevity because it can continue with all the characters being replaceable. You can always get another celebrity in there and the gags can surround their own lifestyle."

"A lot of people are asking me if I have joined some new strip show and I have to explain that it is actually a comedy and a play, that it is not just a Chippendales show... although posing in the pink underpants doesn't help."

Patrick is not adverse to a bit of reality television himself, having made his break on Hollyoaks at its peak through a Channel Four reality audition show.

STAR QUALITY:
Marcus Patrick has just taken on a revealing new role

He said: "I had just been travelling and was pretty much wondering what I was going to do with my life. There was this open audition for Hollyoaks, so anyone could have gone for it, and I had only been to drama centres before that."

"Channel Four decided to televise it – this was even before Pop Idol and all that, so it was quite groundbreaking at the time. Obviously it was done differently as it didn't have all the Simon Cowell cash, so it was never a massive thing and it just ran on T4 in the early days."

Patrick was one of just four who got a part in the soap from the thousands who entered the competition. He soon became a fan favourite.

He said: "It was amazing for me. I cut my teeth in the industry thanks to that."

"I had always wanted to be an actor, but it was a dream. Then I got that chance, took it, fluked it and ran with it and ended up staying with the show for seven years."

Patrick went on to star in the late-night Hollyoaks spin-off shows with on-screen girlfriend Gemma Atkins before finally saying goodbye to the world of soap.

He said: "Actors in Hollyoaks have quite a quick turnover, so I milked it really. I loved it, but at the same time you can't be in Hollyoaks all your life, as much as you would like to."

"It is now the life of a jobbing actor. I have just finished panto in Portsmouth and that was really full on. I have never done one before and people love to do them now – it is not as tarnished as it was 10 years ago, when actors avoided them."

"Work is work and it is a tough industry. I am taking parts in TV, voiceovers, theatre work, anything really... you can't be picky in this industry."

Fortunately, the show that made his name has not left Patrick typecast as his fireman alter-ego and he has taken roles in BBC One's Doctors and ITV's 71 Degrees North and Echo Beach.

Talking openly about his time there, he said: "When you're in a soap you don't have the opportunity to do other things because you are heavily contracted up. You can't do theatre, you're their property until the contract is over. It's a great way for young actors to earn and learn, but you need new challenges."

He is pretty certain that once Wildboyz has finished its tour, he will not pull the classic soap trick of raking up old ground.

He said: "I think that ship sailed, especially as Gemma shot me in my last scene. Going back into Hollyoaks wouldn't be a backwards step, but it wouldn't be the right move. It's never the same as the first time you were there."

Extraordinary wealth of the king of meals

THE Sunday roast is surely the king of dinners. It is synonymous with the UK. We have all grown up with the idea of families getting together to enjoy the simple combination of meat, vegetables and gravy on a weekend.

Its greatness as a meal has even travelled well overseas as many tourist areas in southern France and Spain will strategically place the roast dinner on the menu to appease hungry Brits... and the locals!

But here in Kent we are taking the tradition of the Sunday roast to the next level.

We all know that it is easy to change a roast in accordance with the seasons. There are the hot, filling vegetables of winter such as Brussels sprouts, cabbage and parsnips, or the lighter summer offerings like new potatoes, peas and runner beans. But it is the choice of meats here in the Garden of England that has changed the face of the Sunday roast and opened it up to new experimentation.

Gone are the days when lamb, beef, pork or chicken were all that Kent had to offer. Be on the look-out for roast goose with chilli carrots, roast duck with plum sauce... or even roast woodpigeon!

And let's not forget Kent's other top attribute, the glorious coastline that offers up scores of sumptuous fish dishes. Along the beaches, our restaurants often promote their freshly-caught cod or plaice – or maybe shellfish are more your thing.

The choice of dishes that Kentish folk can proudly call 'locally sourced' provides an extra joy to our Sunday lunch. Here are six of the finest venues.

Floating venue could help to turn tide for the Medway experience

Thas always been a source of disappointment that Maidstone does not make the most of the River Medway.

There is an undeniably attractive footpath alongside it, incorporating Whatman Park on the outskirts, but when it comes to the centre of town itself you can't help feeling one of its main assets is significantly under-utilised.

The Barge might help change all that. Moored next to the Archbishop's Palace, the floating restaurant has added value to the riverbank since it sailed over from France two years ago (the photographic montage in the toilets of the move is worth checking out).

Sitting by the large glass window is highly recommended, particularly at night. The darkness allows you to imagine you are dining on one of Europe's grand rivers. It is possible to convince yourself the twinkling lights from the retail park in the distance are from an elegant opera house, while the hulking façade of the crown court is a towering gothic cathedral. Maybe.

The elegant restaurant's modern European menu offers diners two options: either a smattering of starters to eat tapas-style, or a more straightforward starter/main/dessert.

After opening with bread and olives, which at

RESTAURANT REVIEW

£9 for two was steep, we decided to shun the tapas and stick with convention.

Both our starters were exquisitely presented on plates made of slate and tasted as good as they looked.

The towers of Andalousie spiced pork with patatas bravas (£6) offered a delicious taste of Spain, while the chilli sauce was wonderfully subtle. The same could be said for the pan-fried strips of Kentish beef fillet (£8), which were artfully accompanied by sautéed potatoes, piquillo peppers and red wine jus.

Our expectations were suitably raised, but in my case not for long. For the main course I opted for the roast pheasant à la Française (£13). Other than being slightly dry, there was nothing wrong, but, surrounded by carrots and peas in a nondescript sauce, it was fairly unimaginative compared with the starter.

My dining companion was luckier. The calf's liver with bubble and squeak was stacked in such a way that the pancetta strips on the top bore a passing resemblance to a Big Mac, but it was reportedly delicious.

For dessert we shared an apple tarte tatin (£7). Here the standard returned to the level of the starters as it was encased in a delicate lattice dome of spun sugar. The honey-and-cinnamon ice-cream and redcurrant sauce were superb.

The return to form suggested the pheasant may have been a blip, but I would recommend trying something else from the menu.

With our Merlot (£9.90 for two glasses) drained, we finished off with coffee (£5 for two).

It brought the total to an expensive £71.40, but the location alone means it is worth a try – if you're looking to push the boat out.

He will be joined by Jay Foreman, who has been described as an "equal parts po-faced comedian and finger-licking folk-singer-songwriter" and predicted to go far by comedy hot-shots Chortle. The third act is Carys Nia Williams, another comic who has a penchant for using music in her act. This should be a good show from a new company founded by former Canterbury students.

VALENTINE'S DAY

Let's reclaim the day for love

THEY say romance is dead, that chivalry has been left behind in an era before Playstations and microwave meals... where have our Rhett Butler and Scarlett O'Hara moments gone?

Well, it is time to make a stand and to declare our feelings for our loved ones, for a single day at least.

Let's make this February 14 a day to remember, the day Kent took affairs of the heart back from Jeremy Kyle.

St Valentine is a tricky customer – the patron saint of love has turned a few quid in recent times peddling dodgy stuffed toys, boxes of naff chocolates and over-priced flowers.

His henchman, Corporate Cupid, does much of St Valentine's bidding, tricking couples into spending a fortune on novelty gifts Father Christmas couldn't shift two months earlier.

By all means, buy your loved one the bear cuddling the heart-shaped pillow, or the massage oils that will probably never be used, but just remember, Kent has plenty to offer, too.

Enjoy long walks across our beautiful marshlands, skip through our rolling downs, take in the salty air on our fresh beaches and work up an appetite fit for a loving, intimate meal together. Our fish restaurants are divine, our country pubs – complete with roaring fireplaces – exceptional.

Treat yourself to a stay at one of our top hotels and ignore the chance to argue about who makes the tea with a simple cry of "Room service!".

It is not about what you do, or what you buy, it is all about with whom you are sharing this special moment.

And there are plenty of opportunities in the Garden of England to create those moments.

Here's to the year where buying a potted plant and sherbet dip dab from your local garage doesn't pass for a celebration of love.

Retire in confidence and style with assisted living

DECIDING to move from your family home to a purpose-built retirement apartment can be a daunting experience.

However, to try to make the move easier, it is now possible to test out an apartment with no obligation, thanks to McCarthy & Stone's Assisted Living development, Laurel Court in Cheriton.

Through the initiative, anyone considering purchasing an apartment at Laurel Court will be able to stay in the development's fully-furnished one-bedroom guest suite for up to two nights free of charge.

For two days, they can call Laurel Court 'home' and make use of all the facilities at the development, have lunch in the restaurant, enjoy the immaculate gardens and meet the estate manager along with other residents in the communal lounge. Visitors can also get a feel for the area.

Sharon Callcut, regional marketing manager for McCarthy & Stone, said: "Our assisted-living properties offer many unique benefits that can only be appreciated by experiencing the lifestyle first-hand."

McCarthy & Stone is selling a range of one- and two-bedroom Assisted Living apartments at the Stanley Road development, exclusively for those over the age of 70.

In addition to low-maintenance properties, Laurel Court benefits from communal facilities and support services for residents when they need them, either now or in the future... all in a safe and secure environment that offers peace of mind and independence in a property you continue to own.

On site, there is a waitress-service restaurant. While the apartment's own fitted kitchen is well equipped, residents can choose to dine with family and friends in the restaurant, which offers freshly-prepared hot lunches 365 days a year. And, for those who are unable to make it down to the restaurant due to illness, meals can even be brought to the apartment.

Domestic assistance is also available. One hour a week is provided automatically to residents as part of the service charge, but additional assistance can be purchased, on either a short- or a longer-term basis. Washing, ironing, shopping and other chores can all be done on the resident's behalf if required, leaving more time to enjoy their independence.

Each apartment is wheelchair-accessible throughout and comprises one or two bedrooms, an open-plan lounge/dining room, fitted kitchen and bathroom incorporating both a bath and separate-level access shower with non-slip flooring.

A communal lounge is available for residents to meet for a chat over a cup of tea while also providing a venue for the regular social events.

Furthermore, there is a hotel-style guest suite for hire for family and friends and a function room is available for private parties and gatherings.

And for those who require it, personal care is also available from the on-site care team.

GENERAL Motors is showing its determination to give its Chevrolet brand the big-hitting status it enjoys on American home turf.

Chevy's middle sector Cruze model has already made UK consumers take notice – on road and track – and it is now joined by a smart new Aveo supermini.

This second generation model is a huge improvement over the old car, which was a Daewoo Kalos until the Chevrolet re-branding.

The all-new replacement looks a real Chevy though; affordable with the sort of charm that wove the brand name into so many popular songs – including Don McLean's American Pie.

It is offered only as a five-door, but has a rakish coupé look enhanced by rear handles concealed in the doorframes, and a rising crease line on the lower flanks.

Chevy has ignored the vogue for fully glazed front lighting and given the car twin-podded chrome-mounted headlights flanking the brand's now familiar two-part grille.

A large and airy cabin is made possible by a long wheelbase and rear headroom, legroom and width is excellent, with design highlights being the motorcycle-inspired cluster of dials and gauges and two jet intake-style air vents.

As you might expect of a car intended to champion value – prices start at £9,995 – the materials are rugged rather than lavish, but there's a decent boot and lots of stowage as well, including two gloveboxes.

Typically, Chevrolet's low asking prices don't short change on features; even LS entry trim comes with air con, cruise control, electric and heated door mirrors, electric front windows and six airbags – contributing to a maximum five-star EuroNCAP safety rating.

Mid-spec LT trim (from £10,995) gets you into alloys, steering wheel audio controls and more while flagship LTZ (from £12,195) is luxurious, and all come with Chevrolet's five-year/100,000-mile warranty.

On top of all this though, the Aveo is a decent drive, which won't harm the brand's intention to target younger buyers who demand value for fun. The car's all-new chassis feels taut on the road, yet not at the expense of ride quality, while cabin noise is low for this class.

All engines are new, economical and hard to fault; the 85bhp 1.2-litre entry level petrol unit will be the best-seller, but feels slightly underpowered – keen drivers will prefer the 99bhp 1.4-litre (from £12,375) petrol.

The standout engine though is the 1.3-litre diesel, available with 74bhp and 94bhp outputs and five or six-speed 'box. It's exceptionally smooth, refined and economical (from £12,345) and even available as a road tax-beating eco special (from £12,795).

There is also a six-speed auto option for the 1.4 petrol, though the changes are rather jerky. But there is much to please punters in this new line-up – and much to worry the opposition.

All-new Aveo gives supermini sector real bolt from the blue

LITTLE GEM:
Chevrolet is aiming high with its new Aveo and has created a car that will have rival car-makers in the supermini sector looking in the rear-view mirror

DON'T LIKE	NOT SURE	REALLY LIKE
... the automatic version. Auto changes are not smooth – best to use in manual mode, via an unusual rocker switch on the selector column.	... the plodding entry-level 1.2-litre petrol engine is a good enough match for the car's undoubtedly racy looks. Buy the 1.4 or the diesel.	... the car's all-round appeal and value. Chevy has put down a real marker here and French supermini rivals will really feel the pressure.

Yaris virtues carried through

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TOYOTA'S original 1995-vintage Yaris supermini was a game changer.

Up to that point, the Japanese marque had a woeful record in this sector of the market.

But the first Yaris was distinctively styled, spacious and had a clever and now much imitated sliding rear seat allowing a fine balance between rear legroom and boot space.

It also proved cheap to run and dependable.

From no hoper in this sector, Toyota became a star and the Yaris is the marque's perennial UK best seller, though the reasons for that are now less clear-cut.

For the original proved to be a tough act to follow, so its 2006 successor was more evolution, rather than revolution.

Last September, it too gave way to a new version and one senses that Toyota has played safe again, relying on the Yaris hallmarks of space, reliability and no-nonsense running costs rather than pushing boundaries, as it did way back in 1995.

The styling of the new car is sharp and clever though; Toyota has retained the lofty rear headroom of before, but blacked out the wide rear pillar of the three-door in order to create the optical illusion that the roof is much lower and that the Yaris might, in fact, be a coupe. Similarly, blacked out middle pillars create a lowering effect on the five-door version.

Unfortunately, the chassis is not as sporting as appearance would suggest and the ride can be unruly when the car is pushed hard.

Interior trim is nothing spectacular either and some plastics – such as the top of the dashboard and the armrest caps – while hard yet durable, contrast horribly with upmarket goodies on our SR test car such as the leather trimmed wheel, gear knob and seats, plus sat nav/audio display.

At least we now have all the clocks and dials

TOYOTA YARIS 1.33 SR 5-DR: PRICE £13,835

THE OLD FAITHFUL:

Toyota's Yaris has been relaunched, but it worked so well to begin with that really all that has changed is a little styling grouped ahead of the driver, rather than in a penny-pinching central binnacle as previously. Indeed all the controls are well-arranged, light and easy to use.

There is also plenty of handy stowage in the front, with the USB/Aux/MP3 player socket in the glove compartment so that your precious gadget can be plugged in and hidden from the eyes of the light-fingered.

I was surprised that there is no adjustment to allow the steering wheel to be moved forwards or backwards, though the seats are comfortable and supportive.

Apart from the headroom already mentioned, the Yaris also offers decent legroom and width in the back, with 'piggy in the middle' getting a much better deal on elbow room than in most rival superminis.

Engine choice is fairly thin, with a 68bhp 1.0-litre petrol unit and five-speed gearbox opening the range.

MOTORING NEWS

Up! scores more on doors

VOLKSWAGEN has unveiled a five-door version of its new Up! city car.

It retains the same 2.42-metre-long wheelbase and impressive interior space, plus the capacious 251-litre boot but offers greater access to the back seats.

UK deliveries should start in late 2012 and expect a premium of about £500 against three-door equivalents, which start at £7,995.

Renault opens Scénic route

ORDER books are open for the revised Renault Scénic (from £18,325) and Grand Scénic (from £19,725) MPVs.

The facelift includes more contemporary front styling, plus gloss black and chrome detailing, standard LED daytime running lights, new rear lights and rear parking sensors as standard.

There are also new engines: a 115bhp 1.2 TCe petrol and 110bhp 1.5-litre diesel.

Rio 'coupé' arriving soon

KIA has broken with tradition and made its latest Rio available with three doors as well as five.

Looking even more rakish in this guise, it could almost be termed a coupé and will be priced from just £9,995 – buyers will save £600 against equivalent five door versions.

The same four engines are also offered – two petrol and two diesel.

New Registration '12

Buying a '12 plate may be better bet than the bank

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

NEW car demand last year managed to defy the worst industry predictions and may herald an upturn in demand.

Registrations for 2011 totalled 1.94 million, down 4.4 per cent on 2010, but ahead of the gloomy 1.92 million forecast, according to industry mouthpiece, the SMMT (Society of Motors Manufacturers and Traders).

And diesel and alternatively fuelled cars both took record market shares over the year as average new car CO<sub>2</sub> emissions fell to a new low of 138.1g/km, down 4.2 per cent on the 2010 level.

SMMT chief executive Paul Everitt still expects a tough 2012, but said: "Record numbers of new and updated models, significantly improved fuel efficiency and exciting new technologies will help to encourage consumers into showrooms."

Fact is there are strong arguments for buying a new car even during rocky economic times.

People with savings will see them languishing in the bank earning barely any interest, where as there are savings galore to be made on a car now – just in time for the new '12 registration plate from March 1.

First of all, you should be able to drive a hard bargain, with manufacturers and forecourts keen to deal and being more realistic about list prices in tough times.

You should get a realistic valuation on your old car too, since used car values are buoyant due to the lower number of new cars sold since the recession

ALL MOD CONS: The Skoda Yeti, left, can be a crossover model and a decent off-roader, while the Lexus CT200h, below, is unique – an eco-friendly executive-class hybrid hit in 2007 – meaning fewer used cars in circulation to soak up demand from that sector.

Other buyer incentives out there include tempting finance packages or personal leases – which banks aren't keen to match – insurance and servicing. There are also outstanding warranties available such as Kia's industry-beating seven-year/100,000-mile package.

Servicing deals often cost extra, but can be very cost-effective, so ask about those.

Remember too that road tax also favours downsizing; many small cars and family hatchbacks are either exempt or qualify for zero road tax in year one and modest charges thereafter.

Diesels have won over many skeptics with their economy and good low-down power delivery and now outsell petrol models.

But petrol fuel should remain more affordable than diesel simply because of the way oil refining capacity is geared.

Petrol engines are also cheaper and lighter, and while they still cannot compete on absolute economy against diesels, you need to be a high mileage user to recoup the higher upfront cost of the latter. Their lightness saves wear on the front tyres and mechanicals too.

Small and efficient turbocharged petrol units also make a difference in small cars – they are nimblower and nicer to drive – and road tax and emissions for petrol engines are getting better.

Factor in all of the above and the sums start to add up on ditching something dated and less efficient in favour of a modern and more eco-friendly model – it might be better than leaving the money in the bank.

Important dos and don'ts before buying a new car

DON'T accept the first deal on offer – be ready to haggle.

DON'T be afraid to ask for trimmings like a tank of fuel, car mats or further discounts or extras.

DON'T fall for what seems like a big bargain before you even haggle. It could be an unpopular engine or trim combination or a car on 'run-out' where production ceased a while ago – it might be just as thirsty as your old car and will depreciate badly.

DO pick a model that saves fuel, insurance, road tax and depreciation – it won't get any easier out there.

DON'T be blinded by road tax-exempt, but expensive diesel eco models – check price, running costs, green credentials and the savings over your planned ownership mileage/years, then compare against the closest standard version.

DON'T assume that diesel will save – you usually pay more upfront and the engines are generally heavier, which means more wear on front tyres and mechanicals. The fuel is also dearer at the pumps, while petrol car economy and emissions have improved and they are often nicer to drive.

CROSSOVER STYLE: Kia's eye-catching Sportage has, top, revolutionised the marque's image, while Toyota's Verso is a star turn in the MPV sector

BIG HAUL: Mercedes-Benz Vito – designed for the driver's comfort as well as long-term reliability and efficiency for the operator

New vans are loads better

VAN design has been revolutionised over the past decade or so.

Operators have seen economy, efficiency and flexibility soar, while drivers have enjoyed better performance, refinement and safety.

Initially, this was confined to smaller models derived from cars and included air con and a decent sound system, but the same philosophy has since migrated to larger vans.

The range of van capacities has also widened, varying from as little as three cubic metres for a car-derived hatchback used for courier work or as company runabouts, up to a 17-cubic-metre delivery van.

Access has improved too. Many larger vans have low floors in the driving compartment for easy access and most vehicles above the supermini class now come with at least one sliding door as standard to aid loading – many buyers take the option of a second 'slider'.

There is now a choice usually of side-opening twin doors or a high lift tailgate as well, while cab doors generally have a reduced opening angle, with the double benefit of making it easy for a busy driver to grab the handle to close the door and also avoid it swinging wide and hitting something.

Petrol-driven vans have been displaced by the better economy, range and low-down pulling power of diesels. Extended service periods, lower maintenance costs and longer-lasting parts then compound diesel-operating benefits.

Gearboxes have also changed. A six-speed manual gearbox is the standard – two cogs better than only a few years ago – but urban operators are turning increasingly to automatic, semi-automatic or clutch-less transmissions.

These can usually be driven with manual selection anyway, but are ideal for the stop-start traffic conditions of the town and city and can be as economical as a manual.

Small-mindedness good trait when buying new

CAR-buyers continue to think smaller.

Two decades ago, the family saloon Ford Mondeo-type car dominated, thanks to the company car culture.

Then came the rise of the family hatchback and supermini; throughout the 90s and early Noughties they had a ding-dong battle for market leadership.

However, soaring fuel and insurance costs, greater environmental awareness, punitive road tax on larger cars, and ever more stylish small car designs, have enabled superminis to take some 40 per cent of sales if you include the even smaller city car segment.

Even family hatchbacks had to settle for the number two spot with around 25 per cent of registrations.

More difficult to quantify though is the trend towards 'crossovers' – cars like the Kia Sportage, Skoda Yeti and Citroën C3 Picasso.

As the name implies they straddle several sectors including family hatchback, MPV (multi-purpose vehicle) or people carrier and SUV (sports utility vehicle) and are hard to pigeon-hole under current classifications.

But these 'Swiss Army knives' of the market are here to stay judging by the increasing numbers being sold.

SIZE MATTERS: Top left, Honda's Swindon-built Jazz offers people-carrier design and supermini flexibility

VERSATILE: BMW's all-new X1, above, qualifies as one of a new breed of all-purpose crossovers
